Presidency of America up in the air

Both Donald Trump and Joe Biden claim victory; results show massive polarization among the voters; Trump announces to go to Supreme Court

WEB DESK / DNA

WASHINGTON: The US presidential election remained too close to call as America woke up on Wednesday focussed on a handful of key states. President Donald Trump falsely claimed victory and made unfounded allegations of electoral fraud. Joe Biden's camp described the statement as "outrageous." Both men still have paths to the White House through winning 270 Electoral College votes.

US President Donald Trump carried the prized battleground of Florida, then he and Democrat Joe Biden shifted their focus early Wednesday to three Northern industrial states - Wisconsin, Michigan and Pennsylvania - that could prove crucial in determining who wins the White House. By early Wednesday, neither candidate had the 270 Electoral College votes needed to win. Electoral College votes are assigned to each state, in part based on their population. Trump made premature claims of victories in several key states and said he would take the election to the Supreme Court to stop the counting. It was unclear exactly what legal action he might try to pursue. Several states allow mailed-in votes to be accepted after Election Day, as long as they were postmarked by Tuesday. That includes Pennsylvania, where ballots postmarked by Nov 3 can be accepted if they arrive up to three days after the election.

ICCI hails government's energy relief package for SMEs

the Chamber urged the government to provided this relief on all units of electricity consumed by SMEs and industries to enable them in achieving accelerated growth which would help turn around the economy

ISLAMABAD: Islamabad Chamber of Commerce and Industry (ICCI) has welcomed the announcement of an energy relief package by the current government for SMEs and industries. They termed it a highly positive development as it would bring down the production cost, make our industry competitive and help in enhancing country's exports. However, the Chamber urged the government to provided this relief on all units of electricity consumed by SMEs and industries to enable them in achieving accelerated growth which would help turn around the economy. Sardar Yasir Ilyas Khan, President, ICCI said that power tariffs in Pakistan were considered the highest in the region due to which the cost of doing business had gone up significantly and our SMEs were facing great difficulties in producing goods at competitive prices thus exports were suffering. He hoped that providing 50 percent relief in commercial electricity price to SMEs on additional usage from November this year to June next year and 25 percent relief to all industries on additional usage of electricity for three years would be instrumental in reducing production cost and boosting industrialization in the country leading to increase in exports. He said that abolishing peak hour regime was a laudable step of the government to support the industry. Yasir Ilyas Khan urged the government to reduce high taxes on power tariffs and also consider providing similar relief to industry in gas tariffs for the next three years that would make our industry very competitive and help boost exports. He also urged the government for fixing power tariffs for the next five years at one level, which would give more confidence to the investors and help businesses make long-term planning for growth and expansion. He said that Pakistan was mostly depending on thermal fuel for energy generation due to which cost of electricity was very high and urged that the government to focus on renewable energy sources including water, wind and solar to produce cheap energy that would make Pakistan an attractive destination for local and foreign investment. He further said that government should take measures to control power theft and transmission and distribution losses as to cover such losses, the government mostly tended to pass on their burden to the end consumers due to which commercial and domestic consumers were facing high electricity prices. He said that an inquiry report of NEPRA had disclosed that Discos had installed 30-35 percent faster meters and emphasized to investigate this issue to save consumers from such injustices and unethical practices. - APP

Violence rages in Afghanistan

As the USA goes to the polls to either pick a new Democrat President in Joe Biden or reelect Republican incumbent President Donald Trump, the Afghan peace deal between it and the Taliban has gone on the backburner, losing the momentum seen a few months back. This has been accompanied by a deadly increase in violence with at least two major terrorist attacks taking place in the country within a week. Two days back gunmen stormed a university in Kabul, resulting in an hours-long gun battle ending with 22 students dead and as many injured. Earlier, a suicide bombing at an education centre in the same city claimed 24 lives, mostly from Afghanistan's Shia community. That responsibility for both attacks was claimed by ISIS and targeted educational institutes specifically shows that a new brand of terrorism is emerging in the country. Although ISIS is but a shadow of its former self, it seems the group is still able to recruit militants to plan and execute attacks on soft targets. The Taliban on the other hand are testing the Afghan government and the USA's resolve by opening up a new offensive in the southern Afghan city of Lashkar Gah last month even though negotiations were ongoing. It is clear that there is not going to be any immediate let-up in terrorist activity in Afghanistan. Whatever the result of the US presidential election, the Afghan endgame will remain as complex and difficult a problem as it has remained for the past two decades since the war started. These distressingly high levels of violence should be worrying not only for the US, Afghan government and Taliban negotiators who want a peaceful solution, but also Pakistan whose own stability and security depends on that of Afghanistan. Spoilers such as Taliban fighters not onboard with the peace deal, countries like India operating in the region through agencies and groups like ISIS must be dealt with swiftly with all stakeholders working towards a common goal: a peaceful Afghanistan.

Second turns

THE feeling elsewhere in the government may not yet be one of rapid transformation but change is constant in the information ministry of Punjab. Four turns have already been played, and now we have Dr Firdous Ashiq Awan taking things into her able hands from Fayyazul Hasan Chohan. The outgoing minister was generous with directing his most piercing lines – many of them in the form of crude one-liners – against the PTI government's opponents. It is unclear as to what then prompted this, the second ouster of Mr Chohan, from his position as provincial information minister. It was Mr Chohan who had set the tone for the inaugural PTI government in Punjab with his forceful public rejection and dismissal from sight of anything which he considered even remotely coming in the way of his leader Imran Khan's vision. Back then, he had to be replaced after he made derogatory remarks about a minority community. However, both the successors of this original choice for the coveted post proved rather subdued. After Samsam Bukhari was unable to weave his magic and the gamble of trying out Mian Aslam Iqbal, otherwise thought to be chief ministerial material, failed to pay off, Mr Chohan was drafted in as information minister for the second time and looked safe and secure and prepared for a long stint. That perception proved to be wrong, and the heavens did not fall as Dr Firdous Ashiq Awan emerged on the horizon on a dusky November evening as if blessed on her way to prominence again by some unseen sage. Ms Awan had bowed out in April, as a special assistant to the prime minister, an exit that could hardly be termed as ceremonious. She herself holds the key to the mystery about her new assignment as a reinforcement for Chief Minister Sardar Usman Buzdar's administration. The secret will start to unravel as she speaks. One has to pay attention to the words and tone she chooses.

Democratic Kazakhstan & parliamentary election 2021

Dr Mehmood Ul Hassan Khan

The Election Law provides a technical basis for the conduct of elections and safeguards & guarantees integrity of the process, especially Election Day procedures, counting and tabulation

ELECTION is the "real essence" of modern democracy which determines a true and responsive political system, catering and establishing all democratic norms in a civilized society and the "Republic of Kazakhstan" is indeed a real "democratic" country. Parliament election will be held on January 2021 in Kazakhstan in which hopefully all major political parties will rigorously participate to win "hearts and souls" of the country-wide voters. The Parliament of the Republic of Kazakhstan is the "highest" representative body which represents "collective wisdom", "intellect" and "determination" to achieve a qualitative life. It minimizes gaps between the government and its people. It enhances connectivity among all the stakeholders in the prevailing political system in the country. The Republic of Kazakhstan is a unitary state with a presidential form of government.

From ancient courts of prophecies to modern days of white-house dynamics, human civilization and evolution of rule of law has been maintaining a direct correlation with electoral democracy in which democratic elections are deemed to be "competitive", "attractive", "regular", "transparent", "fair" and "free". Common people/voters have "free" right to vote and elect their members/representatives in the political system. Moreover, competitive and popular majoritarian elections safeguard the vested interests of all the participating political parties in the elections and the Republic of Kazakhstan is no "exception". There have been no incident of pre/post-election engineering, political manipulation or administrative interference/maneuvering because every party and its candidates completely enjoy freedoms of speech, assembly and movement throughout Kazakhstan. The constitution of the Republic of Kazakhstan ensures the periodicity of elections, representative of various social groups in the government, openness and transparency of election authorities. Deity of democracy prevails in the largest economy of the Central Asia, Kazakhstan where political pluralism, transparency and doctrine of equal right, protection of basic human rights and change of government has been conditional to "peaceful" fair and free electoral mechanism wherein every vote "counts" and majority determines the fate of rule. Kazakh President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev has signed a decree scheduling the parliamentary elections for the Majilis (Parliament) for 10 January 2021. It will further strengthen process of "politicization" and "democratization" in the country embarking towards a "viable", "valuable" and "liberal" democracy in the days to come. Kazakhstan needs robust socio-economic prosperity and sustainability of economic development which relies on positive, participatory and productive political system via successful parliamentary elections 2021.

Majilis is the lower chamber/National Assembly of the Kazakh Parliament consisting of 107 deputies who are elected for a five-year term. Nine deputies are elected from the Assembly of People of Kazakhstan, an advisory body under the president of Kazakhstan whose members are drawn from organisations representing major ethnic communities living in the country. The Republic of Kazakhstan is a democratic country which implements all the international protocols pertaining to democratic traditions and norms in its country. Kazakhstan follows and respects all international laws/obligations to conduct free and competitive elections. Elections of the presidency, parliament as well as local representative bodies are held in terms of utmost openness and complete transparency in compliance with national legislation and universally recognized principles for democratic elections, stipulated in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948), International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (1966), European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Protocol No. 1, 1952), Document of the Copenhagen Meeting of the Conference on the Human Dimension of the OSCE (1990). The ruling Nur Otan party dominated political landscape of Kazakhstan and held 84 of the 98 directly-elected seats in the lower chamber of the parliament (Majilis) in parliament election of 2016. Six political parties participated in the elections 2016 and three of them, Nur Otan (82.2%), Ak Zhol Democratic Party of Kazakhstan (7.18%), the Communist People's Party of Kazakhstan (7.14%), won the right to send their deputies to the chamber. Currently, the Nur Otan party has a majority of 84 deputies in the Majilis, while the Ak Zhol and the Communist People's party have 7 deputies each. Kazakhstan is a presidential republic, with the president exercising wide powers, including the right to dissolve the parliament, to initiate and veto legislation, and to appoint the ministers of foreign affairs, interior and defence, as well as the chairperson and two members of the CEC. The upper house is the Senate of Kazakhstan, with 47 members. Members of the Senate are elected on the basis of indirect suffrage by secret ballot, and half of the elected members are up for election every three years. Fifteen members of the Senate are appointed by the President of Kazakhstan with the view to ensure representation for all the diverse national, cultural components of society. In August, seventeen Senate deputies from the nation's 14 regions and cities of Nur-Sultan, Almaty and Shymkent were elected to the Senate. The renewed composition of the Kazakh parliament, it will focus on "quality legislative support for social and economic reforms in the country. The government of Kazakhstan has now introduced valuable changes to provide more and more power to Senate and Majilis. Both have now granted greater authority to serve as a check & balance over the executive branch as a result of a number of amendments to the constitution. The Senate received greater decision making powers, including assuming the legislative powers of the Majilis if that house was dissolved by presidential decree prior to the end of its term. The parliament has now been vested with the ability to call a vote of no confidence on the government with a simple majority vote, as opposed to a 2/3 vote as required before. The right to elect and to be elected is regulated by the Constitutional Act "On Elections in the Republic of Kazakhstan", adopted in September 1995. According to the provisions of the Constitution and this Act the elections of the President, deputies of the Mazhilis of Parliament and of local representative bodies as well as members of local self-government bodies of the Republic of Kazakhstan are held on the basis of universal, equal and direct suffrage by secret ballot. President of Kazakhstan introduced many meaningful political reforms in his country. The institute of parliamentary opposition has been initiated and in the political system due to which one chair and two secretaries of the Majilis standing committees will now be elected from the members of the parliamentary opposition. In addition, the parliamentary opposition will have the right to initiate parliamentary hearings at least once during one session and to set the agenda for the government hour at least twice during one session.

The Election Law provides a technical basis for the conduct of elections and safeguards & guarantees integrity of the process, especially Election Day procedures, counting and tabulation. The constitutionally guaranteed freedoms of assembly, expression, association, access to information, and the right to take part in political life, are guaranteed by the constitution. Paragraph 20 of the 1996 UN CCPR General Comment 25 to the ICCPR requires that "an independent electoral authority should be established to supervise the electoral process and to ensure that it is conducted fairly, impartially and in accordance with established laws which are compatible with the Covenant and undoubtedly the Central Election Commission of Kazakhstan is an independent organization to hold a transparent, fair and free parliament elections in the country.

The political parties of Kazakhstan have begun their political preparations for the upcoming parliament election 2021. Nur Otan is a pro-presidential political party. Its chairman is Nursultan Nazarbayev, who remains in the office even after his resignation. And the current president, Kassym-Jomart Tokayev, was also nominated by this party. Since 2007, Nur Otan has been taking more than half of the votes in the elections to the Majilis (2007 - 88.41%, 2012 - 80.99%, 2016 - 82.20%). Kazakhstan's law on political parties prohibits parties based on ethnic origin, religion, or gender. A 2002 law raised from 3,000 to 50,000 the number of members that a party must have in its ranks in order to register with the Ministry of Justice, divided up proportionally by regions with no fewer than 700 members in each of the fourteen regions and two major cities. Primaries is an intra-party vote where one party candidate is elected. It is held between supporters of a political party. It is used in the USA and resembles a political show, which thereby activates the growth of interest in a political party and its candidates. Kazakhstan's political party landscape is currently dominated by the ruling Nur-Otan party, which dominates parliament and the public debate. However, numerous other political parties exist. The present-day political parties in Kazakhstan can be divided into three categories i.e. Pro-presidential, "Soft" Opposition, and "Hard" Opposition. The current Pro-presidential political parties are Rukhaniyat and the Party of Patriots. The recently reconstituted party Adilet, Ak-Zhol, Auyil, the Communist Party, and the Communist People's Party are soft opposition orientation. The All-National Social Democratic Party, Azat (formerly Naghyz Ak-Zhol) and the unregistered political movement Alga have hard opposition labels. The Republic of Kazakhstan is sitting at the "apex" of true democracy in the central Asian region. Democracy stands for social protection and wellbeing of the general masses and Kazakhstan has been rated first in numerous published reports of the IMF, World Economic Forums, World Banks and Asian Development Bank in terms of poverty reduction, nourishing of human capital, provision of basic necessities of life etc. Democracy upholds economic facilitations and Kazakhstan has been rated among the top world countries for food supplies, employments and social networking. The modern democracy is the champion of human rights and Kazakhstan enjoys great repute of humanitarian assistance and service of humanity at large. Its national security doctrine has never been compromised on this particular issue. Humans are superiors and protected under the centuries old traditions of Kazakhstan already enshrined into its prevailing political system.

Modern democracy depends upon liberalization process and fortunately, Kazakhstan has been in the mainstream of economic liberalization, privatization, immense socio-economic development, gradual but permanent politicization and democratization process, initiation of effective judicial reforms, institutionalization of corruption free practices, good governance and last but not least start of e-government to establish a credible contact with general people to remove their worries and genuine concerns in the country. Elections, political system and democracy are the modern "trinity" of human survival, protection of basic human rights, freedom of expression, socio-economic prosperity, and qualitative life and last but not least, people's prosperity and the Republic of Kazakhstan is the real hub of socio-economic prosperity, human progression and productivity. It is the easiest and smoothest way for power-sharing and gross-root participation in any modern democracy. To conclude the pragmatic constitution of the Republic of Kazakhstan, its responsible but versatile political parties, modern & vibrant but accountable media, diversified and dynamic society and its various actors and transparent organs of the state including the central election commission are the real guarantors of the free, fair and transparent parliament elections 2021.

Competitive, alternative, interactive, regular and meaningful elections guarantee socio-economic stability and sustainability and political mellowness wherein people are the real king-makers in a political race to win support for gaining majority in the elections. Being prominent regional expert of Kazakhstan & CIS I owe that the Republic of Kazakhstan is the real cradle of democracy and upcoming parliament election 2021 would a giant leap towards greater community development and achieving long awaited dreams of sustained spells of socio-economic prosperity and political manifestation.

Bumpy ride to peace in Afghanistan

Iqbal Khan

Intra-Afghan talks began in Doha on September 12 as an "Action Point" of the US-Taliban Agreement of February 29. Substantive talks haven't yet begun, both sides are struggling to converge on to the norms and format of talks

PAKISTAN'S efforts for durable and permanent peace in Afghanistan have received wider recognition. Knowing well the inherent powerful fault lines of the peace process, Pakistani leadership has also been cautioning the world especially the US about the role of spoilers like India. Pakistan has appealed to all neighbours of Afghanistan to play their role to ongoing bring back stability and progress to Afghanistan and the entire region. Journey to Afghan peace is up for a bumpy ride. All realistic assessments point towards bleak prospects of a stable and peaceful Afghanistan—at least in immediate time-frame. While Americans could soon become indifferent, Pakistan may have to confront a long-term problem at hand handle. Former Prime Minister of Afghanistan Gulbuddin Hekmatyar's three days visit to Pakistan marked the revival of contact. As an erstwhile Mujahideen leader, he has the reputation of an Afghan leader having friendly disposition towards Pakistan. This was the second high-level visit from Afghanistan in recent weeks. Earlier, Dr Abdullah Abdullah, the chief of Afghan High Peace Council, visited Pakistan in September. Hekmatyar belongs to the exclusive club of veteran Afghan resistance leadership who at the prime of their youth left their studies to struggle against Soviet occupation of Afghanistan. He symbolizes the agony and pain of his generation, many of his 'Comrades at Arms' have left for their heavenly abode without seeing the end of turmoil in their country.

Landmark event of the visit was his Public Talk at premier think-tank of Pakistan, Institute of Policy Studies, Islamabad, where he outlined his vision of Afghanistan's future, charted the challenges and pointed towards a viable way forward. Former Premier of Afghanistan said, "The only durable solution for peace in the Afghanistan lies in withdrawal of US forces and establishment of a non-aligned, independent and sovereign government by the Afghan representatives". He also urged India to "settle the Kashmir dispute according to wishes of Kashmiri people". During the visit, Gulbuddin Hekmatyar held talks with Pakistani national leadership, including President, Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister. He discussed several issues, including the peace push, Afghan refugees, bilateral trade and student scholarships, with the Pakistani leadership. He praised Pakistan by saying that getting the Taliban to the negotiating table without Islamabad's backing was not possible. "I am happy that Pakistan has adopted a new policy, supporting the peace process, and reducing the tension between the two neighbours," he said.

As supreme leader of Hizb-e-Islami Afghanistan, he announced starting separate negotiations with the Afghan Taliban to help bring peace to the war-torn country. "We have decided to start our own negotiations with the Taliban. First, it would be between the Taliban and Hizb-e-Islami, and then all other political parties will join us," Hekmatyar announced.

Hekmatyar said Afghan President Ashraf Ghani wants to remain in power, that constitutes "a big hurdle in [the progress of ongoing] intra-Afghan dialogue." He accused Ghani of not consulting with political leaders before starting talks with the insurgents. "We support the peace agreement signed between the US and the Taliban despite reservations," he said.

However, "Peace in Afghanistan cannot be achieved without bringing all stakeholders on board," he added. Hekmatyar criticized India and Iran, saying these were the only two states supporting the Ghani administration. "Iran supports the Kabul government as it has problems with the US, while India supports Ghani because of its issues with Pakistan," he said, while urging foreign powers to stop fighting proxy wars in Afghanistan.

Intra-Afghan talks began in Doha on September 12 as an "Action Point" of the US-Taliban Agreement of February 29. Substantive talks haven't yet begun, both sides are struggling to converge on to the norms and format of talks.

Lorne Cook reported for the, The Associated Press that "NATO Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg told reporters on October 21 that the military alliance will not leave Afghanistan until security conditions allow, even as some US troops might be hoping to be back home in time for Christmas".

On October 19, the US special envoy to Afghanistan warned that "distressingly high" levels of violence, notably in the Taliban stronghold of Helmand province threaten to derail peace talks. The US stands committed to withdraw all foreign forces from Afghanistan by July 2021. In return, the Taliban pledged to prevent terrorist groups from using the Afghan soil for attacks, and promised to seek reconciliation with other Afghan groups. Reduction in violence is the latest American buzz word that implies Taliban should stop fighting while the Afghan National Security Forces and the US led occupation forces should keep brow beating Taliban, with impunity and in clear violation of February 29, 2020 US-Taliban Agreement.

Hekmatyar said it was the requirement of justice that those who have sacrificed for Afghanistan for so many years should have the right to govern the country now. "We have lost one million people in the war. We have six million refugees and over three million internally-displaced people. We cannot tolerate foreign forces anymore on our land to kill our innocent people," he said. He said the US has been defeated in Afghanistan without achieving any goals and considers the corrupt and incompetent Kabul government the main reason for its failure. It will be a mistake if the US now adopts another policy other than leaving Afghanistan, he added.

He proposed that Afghan groups should have the opportunity to enter into negotiations with each other at a neutral venue. The discussion agenda would be withdrawal of the US from Afghanistan and an independent sovereign government. The other national issues such as constitution and type of government should be left for later talks after peace is restored. These are national issues and no external forces have the right to decide about these matters, he added.

Hekmatyar said unfortunately some countries think a gap will be created once the US forces leave Afghanistan which they will be able to fill. He hoped the Americans would not repeat the deadly mistake of the Soviets who established their puppet government in Kabul before leaving Afghanistan.

While talking about the current situation in Indian-administered Jammu and Kashmir, Hekmatyar said that India should learn from the defeat of Soviet Union and NATO in Afghanistan, which proves force alone cannot resolve any issue. "I condemn atrocities and barbarism against innocent people in Kashmir and other parts of the world," he said. "The Kashmir issue cannot be resolved by force. India should resolve it as per the will of Kashmiri people."

During his meeting with Prime Minister Imran Khan on October 20, Hekmatyar appreciated Pakistan's positive role in facilitating the Afghan peace process. He also thanked Pakistan for its long-standing contribution to the socio-economic development of Afghanistan and for hosting millions of Afghan refugees for more than four decades. Prime Minister, while welcoming the guest, underscored historic bonds of friendship and brotherhood between Pakistan and Afghanistan. Imran Khan also warned against the damaging role of 'spoilers', within and outside Afghanistan, as this could also undermine the peace dividends to be accrued in terms of progress and prosperity of the Afghan people.

Signals from the US side are pretty confusing, it won't be an overstatement to say that it is still keeping its options about staying or leaving open.

vaccines on an emergency basis for around 10 million nationals. In its first phase, the vaccines will be made available for elderly citizens and health workers. PM Imran Khan was sought for allowing the inter-ministerial committee for holding negotiations with vaccine makers besides ordering the Economic Coordination Committee (ECC) for considering the matter on an emergency basis.

It read that the trials of COVID-19 vaccines have entered into its third phase on the global level and all countries started advance booking for the vaccines expected to be introduced in the first and second quarters of 2021.

The ministry stated in its letter that Pakistan contacted Gavi, the Vaccine Alliance, for getting free-of-cost vaccines or its availability on discounted prices. It is expected to get vaccines from Gavi by the end of 2021. It is pertinent to mention here that the matter related to the advance purchases of COVID-19 vaccines was also discussed by the National Command and Operation Centre (NCOC).

US approves $600m sale of armed drones to Taiwan

FOREIGN DESK

WASHINGTON: The United States plans to sell four armed MQ-9 Reaper drones to Taiwan, the US Department of State announced on Tuesday, in a sale that is likely to further anger China, which claims the self-ruled island as its own. The $600m deal would be the first such sale since the administration of US President Donald Trump loosened US policy on the export of sophisticated and closely guarded drone technology. The sale supports Taiwan's "continuing efforts to modernize its armed forces and to maintain a credible defensive capability", the State Department said in a statement. It will also help maintain political stability and the military balance in the region, it added. The State Department's formal notification gives the US Congress 30 days to object, but that is unlikely given the broad bipartisan support in Washington for the defence of Taiwan. The drones deal, first reported in mid-October, is the latest in a series of sales of military equipment and weapons sales to Taiwan worth about $4.2bn, which have included Harpoon anti-ship missiles, air-launched SLAMER cruise missiles, and mobile light rocket launchers.

‘Azerbaijan to ensure security of Armenians in Karabakh’

I many times said that all those who live in Nagorno-Karabakh will continue to live there in peace and dignity. Armenians are our citizens. There are thousands of Armenians who live in different parts of Azerbaijan

DNA

BAKU: President Ilham Aliyev has said that Azerbaijan will ensure safety of Armenians who live in Nagorno-Karabakh in the same speech where he said that the ongoing military operations will stop once Armenian troops are withdrawn from occupied Azerbaijani territories. Aliyev made the remarks in an interview with the Italian newspaper.

"I many times said that all those who live in Nagorno-Karabakh will continue to live there in peace and dignity. Armenians are our citizens. There are thousands of Armenians who live in different parts of Azerbaijan, primarily in Baku, and those Armenians who live in Nagorno-Karabakh can be sure that their security will be provided, their financial situation will be much better," Aliyev said.

He added that these citizens will live much better than the life they live today under the suppression of the junta regime in Nagorno-Karabakh.

Asked if Azerbaijan started to taste the flavour of the victory, Aliyev said: "Our task was to restore the territorial integrity of Azerbaijan, and we are coming closer to this task." The president added that Azerbaijan was strictly committed to the peaceful settlement talks in the past 30 years, waiting for the restoration of its territorial integrity. Meanwhile, he stressed Armenia's provoking statements and actions in the past couple of years. "So the last one took place on September 27. We had to respond and our response was very sensitive to Armenia. So, when we talk about the victory we did not put in front of us such a target. We wanted to resolve it at the negotiation table. But we were always ready to do it on the battlefield what we are doing," Aliyev said. Speaking about Russia's position not to intervene in the situation, Aliyev said that being one of the co-chairs of the OSCE Minsk Group which created the legal basis for a peaceful solution to the conflict, "mediators must be neutral, no matter how they feel about the situation". "Therefore, the neutrality now which we more or less see on the ground, I think is the only way how things can happen. Therefore, it was not a kind of a green light for us. We responded to the Armenian attack on September 27 without any 100% understanding who will do what. We just did what we thought was right to defend our country, to defend our people, and to restore justice," Aliyev said. Speaking about Turkey's political and moral support to Azerbaijan, Aliyev described it as very important.

"I many times referred to the fact that this is only political and moral support, but it was sufficient. Because such a strong country as Turkey when openly declares its position on this issue, it also sends the signal to the whole world, that Azerbaijan is doing the right thing. Azerbaijan is restoring its territorial integrity, Azerbaijan is fighting on its territory. We are not aggressors, we are not attacking other countries. Therefore, this political support which started in the early hours of the clashes and continues up to now is very important for the conflict resolution," said the president. Aliyev denied the presence of any jihadists in the country fighting on the side of Azerbaijan. He added that so far Azerbaijan had presented no evidence proving this. "We can mobilize several times more if we announce the total mobilization. We have modern weapons. We have sophisticated technology. And we have a very high moral spirit. Therefore, there is no need for that," he added. Aliyev said that Azerbaijan had enough evidence about foreigners fighting on the Armenian side. "We know that PKK is there, we know that some terrorists from the Middle East joined the so-called 'army of Nagorno-Karabakh'. Therefore, unfortunately, this issue is absolutely out of the picture."

Italy agrees night-time curfew

DNA

ROME: Italian officials agreed on Wednesday to impose a night-time curfew, joining a slew of European nations in ramping up restrictions in the face of a dramatic surge in coronavirus cases. But the measure, which restricts Italians to their homes between 10:00 pm and 5:00 am, fell short of the kind of rules in force in countries including France, Belgium and Germany. Governments in Europe are struggling to get a hold of a pandemic that has now infected more than 11 million on the continent. Wednesday saw Russia announce a daily record for cases and deaths, upping pressure on the government only days after President Vladimir Putin said there were no plans for a lockdown. The United States remains the worst-affected country with more than nine million cases and 230,000 deaths. President Donald Trump, who has suffered from the virus, faced off with Joe Biden in a long-awaited election on Tuesday, with tens of millions of mask-wearing Americans streaming to the polls. The virus has transformed the election, with many millions avoiding the queues and the risk of infection by returning postal votes before election day. Trump's handling of the virus has also been under the microscope. With results from crucial battleground states not yet returned, the election was on a knife-edge on Wednesday with neither candidate taking a decisive lead.

The 40-year-old posted a video message and said that he will be wearing a white armband against the blasphemous publications. He emphasized that he as an athlete has learned to respect all cultures, religions, cultures, faith, and beliefs. He added that freedom of speech doesn't disrespect others' religion. spect the religion of Islam and make fun of our Prophet Mohammad (PBUH)," he said. "Islam only preaches the message of peace and love and respect for all the Prophets," he added. "I urge not just Muslim athletes but athletes all over the world who respect other religions - to show solidarity, unity by wearing a white armband and to create awareness that we, as human beings and athletes, we don't disrespect people and countries who disrespect other religions," he concluded. ## Armenia preparing grounds for further attacks against civilians: Presidential aide Armenian armed forces are shelling with heavy artillery villages of occupied Aghdam region of Azerbaijan. It was obvious in the statement of MFA Armenia that they were paving the ground for new war crimes against Azerbaijani civilians," he wrote on Twitter BAKU: Presidential aide Hikmat Hajiyev has said that Armenia is preparing grounds for further indiscriminate attacks against the Azerbaijani civilians. Hajiyev made the remarks to the Armenian Foreign Ministry's earlier statement that "in case of existential threat created for the Artsakh people and the Artsakh government, the defence army has an integral right to defend its population and to counter-attack the enemy". "By such bellicose statement and based on fabricated narrative MFA Armenia prepares the ground for indiscriminate attacks against Azerbaijani civilians. Armenia as a state sponsoring terrorism demonstrated its true face by firing Smerch and SCUD ballistic missiles to Ganja, Barda etc," Hajiyev wrote on his official Twitter account on. On November 4, Hajiyev reported heavy artillery shelling by Armenian troops in villages of Azerbaijan's occupied Aghdam region. "Armenian armed forces are shelling with heavy artillery villages of occupied Aghdam region of Azerbaijan. It was obvious in the statement of MFA Armenia that they were paving the ground for new war crimes against Azerbaijani civilians," he wrote on Twitter. On November 3, Hajiyev posted on Twitter the video of unexploded white phosphorus ordnance being neutralized by ANAMA experts. "Armenia continues to use white phosphorus projectiles against civilians in Tartar region of Azerbaijan. Unexploded phosphorus ordnance was neutralized by ANAMA," he said. "Weapons containing white phosphorus are extremely toxic when inhaled, ingested or absorbed through burned areas and can have severe negative impacts on human health. Such weapons cause severe, partial to full-thickness thermal and chemical burns. Armenia used phosphorus UXOs [unexploded ordnance]," he warned. The presidential aide also tweeted: "Attacks on civilians or civilian objects as well as on forests or other kinds of plant cover White Phosphorus shells prohibited under the Protocol III on Prohibitions or Restrictions on Use of Incendiary Weapons of UN Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons of 1980." He added that reconciliation with Armenia is not going to be easy. "Reconciliation is not going to be easy, and it will require a lot of effort. But we are ready to bring investments/our soft power to Karabakh. Azerbaijan is a multi-cultural society - Armenians living elsewhere in our country with no problems," Hajiyev tweeted. Under the tweet, Hajiyev posted his interview with The Telegraph headlined "Azerbaijan claims to have retaken enough land in Nagorno-Karabakh war to resettle 500,000 Azeris". Armenian armed forces launched a large-scale operation in the front-line zone on September 27 at 6 am, shelling the positions of the Azerbaijani army from large-calibre weapons, mortars, and artillery installations of various calibres. Armenia has been targeting Azerbaijan's densely populated areas and infrastructure projects. Armenia launched missile attacks on Azerbaijani cities and regions - Ganja, Barda, Mingachevir, Khizi, Absheron, Tartar, Gabala, Kurdamir, Siyazan, Goranboy, Aghdam among others.

DNA

withdraws from Paris agreement

FOREIGN DESK

NEW YORK: After a three-year delay, the US has become the first nation in the world to formally withdraw from the Paris climate agreement. President Trump announced the move in June 2017, but UN regulations meant that his decision only takes effect today, the day after the US election. The US could re-join it in future, should a president choose to do so. The Paris deal was drafted in 2015 to strengthen the global response to the threat of climate change. It aims to keep the global temperature rise this century well below 2C above pre-industrial levels and to pursue efforts to limit the temperature increase even further to 1.5C. The delay is down to the complex rules that were built into the Paris agreement to cope with the possibility that a future US president might decide to withdraw the country from the deal. Previous attempts to put together a global pact on climate change had foundered because of internal US politics. The Clinton administration was unable to secure Senate backing for the Kyoto Protocol, agreed in 1997. So in the run up to the Paris climate talks, President Obama's negotiators wanted to ensure that it would take time for the US to get out if there was a change in leadership.

Ethiopia
declares emergency in Tigray

FOREIGN DESK

ADDIS ABABA: Ethiopia's government has declared a state of emergency in the northern Tigray region after Prime Minister Abiy Ahmed accused the opposition-led local government of attacking federal troops and trying to "loot" military assets. A statement issued by Abiy's office on Wednesday said the Federal Council of Ministers made the declaration "recognising that illegal and violent activities within the National Regional State of Tigray are endangering the constitution and constitutional order". "Our defence forces ... have been ordered to carry out their mission to save the country. The final point of the red line has been crossed. Force is being used as the last measure to save the people and the country," Abiy said in a social media post. Military operations in the region have commenced, Abiy's spokeswoman Billene Seyoum told the Reuters news agency on Wednesday, without giving further details. In September, Tigray held regional elections in defiance of the federal government, which called the vote "illegal". The row has escalated in recent days with both sides accusing each other of plotting a military conflict.

Nigeria fire
thousands

ABUJA: A fire at an internally displaced persons camp in northern Nigeria left at least 7,200 people without shelter, authorities said early on Wednesday. A total of 1,200 tents were burned in the fire at the camp in Gajiram village in Borno state, according to Yabawa Kolo, an official from Nigeria's Emergency Management Agency (SEMA). Officials said the incident, which occurred last week, was the latest in a "series of the annual fire outbreaks" at the camp, reported on an online news website called the Premium Times. The camp includes those who escaped the violence of the Boko Haram armed group. Kolo said the government sent humanitarian aid to the camp's residents. Five children were killed and 7,457 people lost their tents in a fire last year at a refugee camp in Borno state, reported Anadolu Agency. Armed groups have forced more than two million people to flee their homes since 2009 when Boko Haram began an armed campaign. Some 30,000 people have been killed in the conflict and millions forced from their homes.

PM's relief package to boost exports, says Iftikhar Malik

Hailing the package, Iftikhar Ali Malik said here Wednesday that it was long awaited demand of the entire business community which the prime minister had fulfilled. He said 50 per cent record reduction in power tariff would instantly address

LAHORE: The epoch making package offered by Prime Minister Imran Khan is bound to boost export, poised to promote small and medium enterprises, promise to strength national economy and bring sigh of relief and solace to business community badly hit by globally deadly virus pandemic Covid 19. Hailing the package, President SAARC Chamber and Chairman United Business Group Iftikhar Ali Malik said here Wednesday that it was long awaited demand of the entire business community which the prime minister had fulfilled. He said 50 per cent record reduction in power tariff would instantly address the most burning issue of high cost of doing business compared to neighbouring countries. He said now traders and entrepreneurs could effectively compete global markets and boost export worldwide. Iftikhar Ali Malik said the package would promote industries in the country that had suffered losses in the past due to high power tariff. He said for next three years, all industries on additional usage of electricity would be provided

25 per cent relief on the basis of their previous bills. He said an end to peak-hour system for commercial users, with provision of uniform electricity rates round the clock would eliminate the prevailing disparity in doing of business. He said a strong infrastructure of energy was vital to help industries grow and compete with global market. He said that now Pakistan would not lag behind India and Bangladesh in terms of exports. He said that industrialisation would create ample job opportunities for jobless people. He regretted that the contracts signed with power generation companies during previous tenures resulted in production of high-cost power which had bad effects on industrial sector. The SAARC CCI president further said major chunk of the economies of Japan, China, France and several other developed countries was based on promotion of SME sector and the PM must toe the same policy to attain sustainable economic stability on sound footing which he added was also pre requisite for political stability. During the pandemic of COVID-19, economy was fractured, however, the PM successful strategy steered the country out of crisis with bare minimum casualties, he added. He said taxation be totally streamlined with broadening of tax base instead of levying double taxation on existing tax payers. He said that United Business Group would fully support the government for brining non tax payers into tax net which, he added, was need of the hour without which the country could not make progress. - APP

Libyan factions agree on implementation of ceasefire deal

WEB DESK

TRIPOLI: Libya's rival military factions have agreed on a plan for implementing a ceasefire deal reached last month, the United Nations' acting envoy to Libya Stephanie Williams said. The announcement on Tuesday came one day after a meeting of a joint military commission to discuss the implementation of the deal opened on home soil for the first time. The meeting followed a "permanent" ceasefire agreement signed by the warring factions in Switzerland last month, intended to pave the way towards a political solution to the conflict. A major oil producer, Libya has been wracked by violence since a NATO-backed uprising in 2011 overthrew and killed longtime leader Muammar Gaddafi. It has since been dominated by armed groups and divided between two bitterly opposed administrations: the UN-recognised Government of National Accord (GNA) based in the capital Tripoli, and a rival administration in the east, backed by renegade military commander, Khalifa Haftar. Haftar, backed by Egypt, Russia and the United Arab Emirates, launched an offensive on Tripoli in April 2019 but was beaten back in June by the GNA with military support from Turkey. The warring factions returned to the negotiating table in September in UN-supported talks held in Morocco, Egypt and Switzerland. The latest talks are taking place in the remote desert oasis of Ghadames, some 465km (290 miles) southwest of Tripoli and near Libya's borders with Algeria and Tunisia - far from the power bases of either side. In the meeting, the two sides agreed to "establish a military subcommittee to oversee the withdrawal of military forces to their respective bases and the departure of foreign forces from the front lines," Williams said. The commission also decided to "meet in Sirte as soon as possible" and make the central coastal city its headquarters, Williams added.

'Armenia must be held accountable for its crimes'

Armenia, grossly violating the requirements of international humanitarian law, makes armed strikes against civilians, children, women, and the elderly, said Azerbaijani ombudsman

DNA

BAKU: Aggressor Armenia, which has held the Azerbaijani historical and ancient lands under occupation for almost 30 years, has committed numerous war crimes, massacres, and genocide during this period, Azerbaijani Human Rights Commissioner (Ombudsman) Sabina Aliyeva said in an interview with Trend news agency on Nov. 3. "This country demonstrates its fascist and terrorist essence even today," Aliyeva said. "First of all, Armenia, grossly violating the requirements of international humanitarian law, makes armed strikes against civilians, children, women, and the elderly." "To be more precise, the Armenian Armed Forces, continue their war crimes, violating the humanitarian ceasefire three times, using prohibited ammunition, missile systems and heavy artillery, fired on settlements and civilian infrastructure located far beyond the conflict zone," ombudsman added. "As a result, there are numerous casualties among civilians, as well as massive destruction," Aliyeva said. "Armenia is also targeting religious and cultural monuments, shrines, and universal values, which are part of the Azerbaijani historical and cultural heritage." "In this regard, the attacks on ancient Ganja city with ballistic missiles caused great damage to cultural sites related to the world cultural heritage," the ombudsman said. Thus, Aliyeva emphasized that the international humanitarian law, including the 1954 UNESCO Hague Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict, the 1972 Convention concerning the Protection of World Cultural and Natural Heritage, the IV Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 1949, the 1992 European Convention on the Protection of the Archaeological Heritage and other international documents were grossly violated. "In general, these criminal acts, terrorist acts, a gross violation of international humanitarian law witnessed by the international community, in particular the violation of the provisions of the IV Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, as well as the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, testifies to the neglectful and disrespectful attitude of the Armenian political leadership to the norms of international law," Aliyeva said. "From the very first days, we conducted missions to investigate the facts of terror in Naftalan, Tartar, Ganja, Barda and also visited the relatives of the dead and wounded and met with the wounded," ombudsman said. "We prepared five reports based on the factual materials collected during the field investigations and presented them to the international community," Aliyeva said. "Currently, we are preparing the sixth report in connection with the numerous human casualties and destruction caused by the Armenian Armed Forces' another shelling of densely populated areas of Barda district by using prohibited cluster shells," the ombudsman said. "This report will also be presented to the international community."

Hydrometeorology is important for ensuring our security: Mirziyoyev

The material and technical base of the Center for Hydrometeorological Service is outdated, and the economic profitability is low. In particular, over the past 9 months, the center was able to cover only 6 percent of expenses from its own income

MONITORING DESK

TASHKENT: President of Uzbekistan Shavkat Mirziyoyev held a meeting on the priority tasks of improving the activities of the domestic hydrometeorological service. The hydrometeorological service is important for many areas, such as agriculture, energy, transport, ecology. But due to the lack of proper attention over the years, this area in Uzbekistan has lagged behind the times. Upper-air observations have not been conducted since 1995, which reduces the reliability of weather data. According to international standards, there should be 4,000 stations on the territory of our country, but in reality there are only 335. The material and technical base of the Center for Hydrometeorological Service is outdated, and the economic profitability is low. In particular, over the past 9 months, the center was able to cover only 6 percent of expenses from its own income. Hydrometeorology is one of the areas important for ensuring our security. Today the main task is to change the quality of services in the system," said Shavkat Mirziyoyev. The meeting presented a presentation on the phased commercialization of the center's services. Today meteorological data is provided free of charge to 35 departments, including about 20 commercial organizations. The cost of services is lower than the cost and has not been revised for 15 years. The head of state stressed the importance of revising prices and expanding the coverage of paid services. The presence of many unused features is indicated. For example, next year, on the basis of a public-private partnership, one solar power plant will be built in Karmaninsky and Nurabad districts, and in 2022 - three solar and one wind power plants. These stations will use the services of the meteorological service to plan their power generation. In addition, it is possible to provide paid services to Internet services for weather forecasting, clusters and foreign scientific institutions. The Hydrometeorological Center stores observational data for the last 100 years. That's 18 million sheets. The meeting set the task of fully digitizing this data. The deficiencies in the material and technical support of the meteorological service are considered in detail. It was noted that only 14 out of 70 weather stations are automated. The weather forecast is made using 10-year-old software, which negatively affects the promptness of preparing data on weather and natural disasters. It was emphasized that the existing three weather radars - in Tashkent, Samarkand and Nukus - are not enough. In this regard, it was instructed to install locators in Bukhara, Navoi, Surkhandarya and Namangan regions in the coming years, automate all meteorological stations, build new stations and posts. The implementation of these measures will improve the quality and efficiency of the meteorological service. Ushydromet is the regional center of the World Meteorological Organization. Stressing the importance of preserving this status, the head of state instructed to organize a regional hub in Samarkand in 2022 to collect, process and store backup data. Meteorological data is one of the important factors in ensuring the efficiency of agriculture. Overseas enterprises of the agro-industrial complex are provided with more than 20 types of services such as determination of plant moisture, precipitation, soil temperature.

JERUSALEM: Israel has banned the deputy director of the Jerusalem Waqf Department from entering Al-Aqsa Mosque compound for six months. "I have received an Israeli order banning me from Al-Aqsa Mosque for six months," Sheikh Najeh Bakirat told Anadolu Agency on Wednesday. He said the Israeli authorities have given no reason for the ban. Bakirat noted that Israeli police and intelligence had raided his office last week, citing a threat to Israel's security. Israel had banned Bakirat from entering the Al-Aqsa Mosque for 23 times since 2001 and detained him 13 times. "I reject this Israeli ban order," he said. "This is an Israeli attempt to empty Al-Aqsa Mosque and disrupt the work of the Waqf department in Jerusalem," he added. Al-Aqsa Mosque is the world's third-holiest site for Muslims. Jews call the area the Temple Mount, claiming it was the site of two Jewish temples in ancient times. Israel occupied East Jerusalem, where Al-Aqsa is located, during the 1967 Arab-Israeli War. It annexed the entire city in 1980 in a move never recognized by the international community.

IDLIB: Seven civilians were killed and 13 others injured in regime artillery shelling of civilian areas on Wednesday in Syria's northwestern Idlib province, according to the White Helmets civil defense agency. The White Helmets said regime attacks left four civilians dead in Ariha city, two in Kafarya village and one in Idlib city. Another 13 civilians were wounded by the shelling and were transferred to nearby hospitals. In May 2017, Turkey, Russia and Iran announced that they had reached an agreement to establish a de-escalation zone in Idlib, as part of the Astana talks on Syria. Despite subsequent understandings that were concluded for the ceasefire in Idlib, the most recent of which was last January, the regime forces and their allies continued their attacks on the region. Since January 2019, the attacks have killed more than 1,800 civilians and displaced more than 1.94 million people who fled to relatively calm areas or close to the Turkish border. On March 5, Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan and Russia's Vladimir Putin announced that they had reached a ceasefire agreement in Idlib, which took effect the next day.

Beijing
deny Nepali opposition's accusations

FOREIGN DESK

BEIJING: China and Nepal denied the accusations of Nepali opposition legislators who said Beijing had seized territory along the Himalayan border between the two nations. Jeevan Bahadur Shahi, a provincial legislator of the opposition Nepali Congress party, said Chinese troops had crossed the border and built nine concrete structures about one kilometre (0.6 miles) inside Nepal, at Limi in the district of Humla bordering Tibet. Shahi, who represents the area, told Reuters that China did not object when Nepali villagers built a road in the sparsely populated area 10 years ago. "They are now saying the small valley belongs to them," Shahi said. The claims were first reported on Tuesday by London's Daily Telegraph newspaper, which quoted Shahi and another Nepali politician as saying China had annexed dozens of hectares from the Himalayan nation bordering Tibet, beginning in May. China seized control of Tibet in 1950 in what it describes as a "peaceful liberation". "It is not true that China has encroached our land and had constructed buildings there," said Sewa Lamsal, a spokeswoman for Nepal's foreign ministry, but she did not elaborate. In Beijing, a foreign ministry spokesman, Wang Wenbin, dismissed the report of China seizing territory from Nepal as a "completely unfounded rumour". - APP

'BRI very concerned about Pakistan's environment'

By the end of 2019, China had participated in more than 160 climate projects in countries along BRI, involving wind power, solar power, hydropower, biomass power, geothermal and other types of projects

DNA

ISLAMABAD: The International Institute of Green Finance (IIGF) of China Central University of Finance and Economics (CUFE) released BRI climate finance report which emphatically analyzes several cases of CPEC projects, Gwadar Pro reported on Wednesday. According to the report, to help the countries along BRI enhance their capacity of mitigating and adapting to climate change, China has carried out climate projects. By the end of 2019, China had participated in more than 160 climate projects in countries along BRI, involving wind power, solar power, hydropower, biomass power, geothermal and other types of projects. Among them, several projects in Pakistan are mentioned, such as 900 MW Photovoltaic Power Plant (on Ground) in Punjab Province, Dawood Wind Power Project, 30MW PV Plant, N-J Hydropower Station, Karot Hydropower Station. Of the 50 projects listed in the report, 9 are CPEC projects. Liu Huixin, the Research fellow, added that BRI is very concerned about Pakistan's climate and environment. China has invested in renewable energy projects to ease local energy shortage while also protecting sustainable development. The report also mentioned the challenges which Chinese investors are facing.

The main problems encountered by climate change projects in this region include the coordination between the investing enterprises and the BRI countries, the market competition for the projects, as well as the risk assessment system and financing methods for project investment. Professor Wang Yao, the dean of IIGF, said that including Pakistan, China's climate investment and financing in the countries along BRI has achieved many fruits. Meanwhile, there are many cases that have been successfully implemented, which contribute to the local economy, society, environment, and climate change response. "In the future, China will establish standards for climate investment and financing to guide more projects under BRI, increase investment in renewable energy projects, gradually abandon investment in fossil energy, and promote low-carbon transformation of local industries," Wang said.

Matiari-Lahore HVDC line being completed

DNA

BEIJING: Recently, one of the key projects of CPEC, Matiari to Lahore +660 kV High Voltage Direct Current (HVDC) Transmission Line Project, has almost been completed as its Lahore converter station DC bipolar finished open line test, Gwadar Pro reported on Wednesday. The 886 kilometers of transmission line runs from the southwest to the northeast of Pakistan, passing through the provinces of Sindh and Punjab. It is the first +660 kV DC project overseas of the State Grid Company of China (SGCC) with completely independent intellectual property rights, and all its economic and technical indicators are at the international leading level. Due to the old circuits and inadequate power transmission channels, it is difficult to transport the abundant power resources in southern Pakistan to the north, where people suffer from a severe shortage of electricity. The change came in 2015. In the summer of 2015, a severe heat wave struck southern Pakistan and caused the deaths of about 2,000 people from dehydration and heat stroke. The power outage was one of the main reasons for this tragedy. The same year, China and Pakistan agreed to form a '1+4' cooperation structure with the CPEC at the center and Gwadar Port, energy, transport infrastructure and industrial cooperation being the four key areas to achieve common development.

Saudi Arab eases curbs on foreign workers

RIYADH: Saudi Arabia will remove several key restrictions on foreign workers in an overhaul of the kingdom's controversial labor policies, part of a plan to attract overseas talent and increase job market mobility. Non-Saudis will no longer need their employer's permission to change jobs, travel abroad or leave the country permanently, according to Sattam Alharbi, a deputy minister at the Ministry of Human Resources and Social Development. "Runaway" reports that employers can file against foreign workers who stop showing up to their jobs - effectively rendering them fugitives - will be abolished and replaced with a procedure for ending their contract, Alharbi said in an interview with Bloomberg on Wednesday. The new rules will come into effect on March 14 and apply to all foreign workers in the private sector, regardless of salary level, he said. The changes could have a dramatic effect on Saudi Arabia's labor market and the lives of the 10.5 million foreign workers who make up about a third of the kingdom's population. The current "kafala" or "sponsorship" system, used for expatriates in Gulf Arab countries for decades, has been criticized by human rights groups as a form of indentured servitude. Some economists argue that the system also entrenches a practice of private employers hiring cheaper and more easily-controlled foreign workers who enjoy scant protections, even as Saudi unemployment rises. "These changes are not small changes - it's huge," Alharbi said, explaining that the government had worked on the overhaul for two years. "We aim to achieve more inclusion for Saudis, attract talent, improve the working conditions, make Saudi Arabia's labor market more dynamic and productive." - DNA
