ADB to provide $300m for economic stability

ADB's program will help Pakistan recover its current account deficit in a sustained manner and continue to facilitate export diversification

SHUJAAT HAMZA / DNA

ISLAMABAD: The Asian Development Bank (ADB) has approved a $300 million policy-based loan to help promote macroeconomic stability in Pakistan by facilitating improved trade competitiveness and export diversification. "While COVID-19 hit Pakistan at a critical point in its macroeconomic recovery, the government's ongoing efforts to ensure stability have started showing encouraging results this fiscal year," said ADB Principal Public Management Specialist Hiranya Mukhopadhyay in a statement issued on Friday. "ADB's program will support these efforts and help Pakistan to improve its export competitiveness—now more important than ever given the impacts of the pandemic." ADB's program will help Pakistan recover its current account deficit in a sustained manner and continue to facilitate export diversification. It will introduce important tariff and tax-related policy reforms to help improve Pakistan's international competitiveness and further strengthen key institutions, including accreditation bodies, the Export-Import Bank of Pakistan, and the Pakistan Single Window. The new financing falls under Subprogram 2 of the Trade and Competitiveness Program. Under the first phase, ADB helped the government usher in key reforms, including reducing or abolishing tariffs and ad hoc duties on a large number of raw materials and intermediate goods. Several steps were also taken to introduce e-commerce, strengthen key institutions involved in facilitating trade, and enhance the export certification process. Since fiscal year 2004, Pakistan has registered a rise-and-fall pattern of export growth reflecting underperformance in its export industry and long-term decline in export competitiveness. This is compounded by lost export growth momentum from COVID-19, which has reduced high-income countries' demand for manufacturing goods and disrupted the supply of raw materials. ADB is coordinating its efforts with other development partners and donors while the program complements International Monetary Fund-led reform initiatives by helping to improve competitiveness, which will help build robust foreign exchange reserves. ADB is committed to achieving a prosperous, inclusive, resilient, and sustainable Asia and the Pacific, while sustaining its efforts to eradicate extreme poverty. Established in 1966, it is owned by 68 members—49 from the region.

'Opposition trying to create impression of victimization'

LAHORE: Special Assistant to Punjab Chief Minister on Information Dr Firdous Ashiq Awan on Friday said that the opposition was trying to create an impression of political victimization by the government.

The release of Shehbaz Sharif and Hamza Shehbaz on a five-day parole to participate in the last rites of his (Shehbaz's) mother was a goodwill gesture of the Punjab Chief Minister Sardar Usman Buzdar.

Addressing a press conference here, she said those who were chanting hollow slogans today had emptied the national exchequer in the past and such corrupt elements could not hoodwink the nation any more as their incompetency and corrupt faces had been exposed to the public.

She said that the alliance of opposition parties was only to safeguard their personal interests and looted money and they had nothing to do with people's problem. The nefarious narrative of the opposition had been rejected by the people, she said and added that the lust for power had blinded the opposition. She said the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf

(PTI) government would fulfill its promise of strengthening the institutions and Prime Minister Imran Khan was moving forward with the mission to hold the supremacy of law. She said the PTI government was making every possible effort to end the hereditary politics and that day was not far when the people of Pakistan would be free from political slavery. She said "We all have mothers. Mothers are blessings. I offer sincere condolence to the Sharif Family on the death of Begum Shamim Akhtar." The death of Begum Shamim Akhtar was not a good omen for the Sharif Family ly as there was no one left behind to pray for them, she added.

While criticizing the Sharif Family, Firdous Ashiq Awan said that she felt pity that the dead body of Begum Shamim Akhtar had been sent through a cargo plane. She said that the Calibri Queen was not fully aware of the cultural values and family traditions. Maryam Safdar should stay at home and attend the last rites of her late grandmother instead of attending the processions, she stated. She said, "It's not the right time for political point-scoring as we have to fight corona virus." The opposition should refrain from putting the lives of people at stake just for their political interests, she said. The opposition rallies could lead spread of corona virus at a large scale in the country, she maintained. To a question, she said the government would ensure the supremacy of law and violation of SOPs would not be tolerated under any circumstances. The people had rejected the PDM's narrative at the Peshawar procession and all the opponents were blaming one another for the failure, she added. — APP

He said that Pakistan and Turkey have shown interest to sign an agreement to provide dual nationality to their citizens and stressed that this process should be expedited that would help in increasing bilateral trade and investment between the two countries. He said that Pakistan and Turkey should also finalize FTA that would give a significant boost to bilateral trade. Briefing the Turkish delega-

'Digital divide a major obstacle in digital trade'

This was stated in a virtual workshop 'Toward achieving a sustainable regional integration in Pakistan: Digital trade and health integration' organized by the Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI), In collaboration with UN Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (UNESCAP)

ISLAMABAD: To address the existing digital divide and to promote digital trade in Pakistan, tax rationalization for ICT sector and development of telecom infrastructure in Pakistan has a vital role to play. All stakeholders need to put collaborative efforts to provide an enabling environment with the focus on information technology and telecommunication in the country. Member Prime Minister's Taskforce on IT and Telecommunication, Mr. Pervez Iftikhar said this while sharing his views at virtual workshop 'Toward achieving a sustainable regional integration in Pakistan, Technical Education & Vocational Training Authority, and Unilever, amongst others. While introducing the ESCAP's initiative to measure the digital regional integration, Dr Yann Duval, UNESCAP, informed the participants that the country study on with SDPI on digital exports aims to play facilitating role to support decision-makers prioritizing different areas of regional integration. Dr Vaqar Ahmed, Joint Executive Director, SDPI, highlighted 8 main areas where policy interventions are required to boost Pakistan's digital exports. The areas he identified included addressing any gaps in the legal framework and regulations, investment policy for technology sector; making tax regime consistent across the federation, enabling commercial banks to understand the digital business ecosystem, improving data protection as well as strengthening consumer rights, relaxation in foreign exchange movement for foreign investors, and addressing overall skills and digital literacy. "Promotion of digital trade products and services should be an integral part of any free trade agreements signed by Pakistan," Dr Ahmed concluded. Dr Adil Nakhuda, representing Institute of Business Administration (IBA), presented that exports for Pakistan medical-related products are concentrated on three products and imports tend to be more diversified. "Pakistan is competitive in limited number of products which limits the level of diversification in exports basket" Dr Adil explained and recommended that regular meetings of health ministers must be organized to exchange knowledge on tackling health challenges among neighboring countries. Ms Aisha Moriani, JS WTO at Ministry of Commerce (MoC), informed the participants that the government has taken some key initiatives such as e-Commerce Policy of Pakistan, National e-Commerce Council, mutual recognition agreements related to the manpower export, food products and medical supplies.

Ideas Conclave 2020 ends with Afghan discussions

The third session of the Conclave titled, "Realigning the Region" brought together former ambassadors Maleeha Lodhi and Janan Mosazai of Afghanistan, Professor Marvin Weinbaum from the US, and Indian journalist Siddharth Varadarajan together to discuss challenges in Afghanistan's peace process

DNA

ISLAMABAD: On the day of Jinnah Institute's Ideas Conclave 2020, sessions were held with leading international diplomats, journalists and economic experts discussing issues in both the South Asian region and beyond. The third session of the Conclave titled, "Realigning the Region" brought together former ambassadors Maleeha Lodhi and Janan Mosazai of Afghanistan, Professor Marvin Weinbaum from the US, and Indian journalist Siddharth Varadarajan together to discuss challenges in Afghanistan's peace process. Speakers saw that this is a question affecting those within the country as well as the entire region. "There are deep divisions that still exist in the region; any agreement made in Doha can be jeopardised by continued differences between countries in the region whose results will be disastrous for all countries beyond Afghanistan," observed Ambassador Janan Mosazai. Ambassador Lodhi explained that the changing face of geopolitics in the world was a significant factor beyond the Covid crisis, leading to greater uncertainty for the future of the Afghanistan. "The world is passing through an unsettled phase not just because of Covid but because of international power shifts in flux, a rules-based international order framed under the weight of so-called 'strong men' acting unilaterally, trying to re-write the rules of the game," stated Ambassador Maleeha Lodhi. Moderated by Ammara Durrani, Senior Fellow Jinnah Institute, the session saw all participants agree that international powers should not leave Afghanistan to its own means after a hasty pullout. "(The) US will not walk away from Afghanistan as it did in the 90s, which created a host of challenges for everyone. Back then, China and Iran were different entities to what they are now, and the US is attentive to this. But its commitment is certainly reduced, and the international community takes its lead from that stance. As for Indo-Pak relations, the BJP government led by Modi has made things more difficult for resolving the Kashmir issue," said Professor Marvin Weinbaum. The third and final day of 'Jinnah Institute's Ideas Conclave 2020' commenced with a conversation on 'Inequities in Wealth and Development' where experts discussed the current state of the economy in Pakistan, the impact of Covid-19, and what path of recovery should be adopted considering the rising levels of inequality. Speakers of the session included former Provincial Minister of Finance, Aisha Ghaus Pasha, General Secretary PMLN Sindh, Miftah Ismail, Executive Director IBA, S. Akbar Zaidi, and Associate Professor of Political Economy at QAU, Aasim Sajjad Akhtar. The session was moderated by Assistant Editor at Dawn Newspaper, Khurram Husain. Akbar Zaidi explained that despite poverty levels going down in South Asia, inequality continues to be on the rise because it is far more difficult to remedy due to structural issues. "Poverty can be addressed with simple transfers of wealth. But inequality needs looking at ownership of assets and networks; the continued conflation of 'poverty' and 'inequality' as terms by official decision makers has prevented an examination of factors that cause inequality", he added.

A new platform

AS the Organisation of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) reunites, Shah Mehmood Qureshi looks all set to discuss the Kashmir issue for the first time since India repealed the region's special status and has been occupying the region illegally at the Council of Foreign Ministers' meeting. The OIC has always been one of the major platforms through which Pakistan has attempted to incur change, especially in regards to Kashmir, and this time is no different. Throughout the course of decades, the IOC has been debating on Kashmir, ultimately settling on the decision that it would be best to follow the directive on the UN Security Council. However, this year, Pakistan's aim is to highlight the atrocities being committed in a region that has been subjugated by Indian forces that have stripped it of its identity as well. If those who are closest to our foreign policy trajectory are aligned with our views, then the case for the Kashmiri people becomes that much stronger. As such, it is imperative for our Foreign Minister, Shah Mehmood Qureshi, to the support of the Middle Eastern and Muslim countries that are in attendance for the meeting. The commitment of the IOC to keep the Kashmir dispute on a global radar is evident through the creation of the OIC Contact Group on Jammu and Kashmir, which met in June of this year. The outcome of the meeting was a united call for India to withdraw from the region and abstain from committing any more human rights violations as well. If the same kind of support is extended to Pakistan in this OIC meeting as well, there is no doubt that India will be subjected to immense pressure. Considering that we have been demanding a meeting of the OIC, we must make the most out of this opportunity. This is the perfect platform to address the plight of the Kashmiri population amongst those who are the closest to the conflict.

The opposition's neglect

AS the pandemic gets worse across the country, reaching the highest daily toll reported since July, its effects do not escape politicians either. It appears holding mass country-wide rallies in a pandemic might have been a mistake, as now one of its ringleaders, Bilawal Bhutto-Zardari has confirmed that he has tested positive for COVID-19 and is self-isolating. We wish Bilawal Bhutto-Zardari well and a speedy recovery. Yet the reach of the pandemic should alarm those who have so far been neglecting social distancing and have been advocating rallies and events with mass gatherings. It is unfortunate also that the PDM is still insisting on holding large public gatherings. The government and the opposition have previously been having a war of words on the issue of rallies—with Prime Minister Imran Khan accusing the opposition of “playing reckless politics with people's safety”, with PDM president Maulana Fazlur Rehman replying that the government was making desperate attempts to foil the rally on the pretext of COVID-19. The opposition has vowed to continue with its rallies despite bans by the district government on outdoor gatherings which exceed a certain size. The government may have political reasons to oppose the rallies—yet the opposition at this point cannot deny the disastrous impact that its campaigning through open rallies will have on the country, the hospitals and indeed, their own followers who will be put most at risk. Like Bhutto contracted the virus, hundreds of thousands of people who gather at the rally will also be put at risk. Experts and doctors have warned that intensive care units at major hospitals in the country are running out of beds. The daily toll has exceeded 3000 in the last two days. The opposition can no longer pretend that the contentions against their current approach towards campaigning are only political, and the government needs to take responsibility in negotiating with the opposition to tone down the rallies. If the country means to control the pandemic without a strict economic lockdown, it desperately requires unity of all factions.

Pervasive public, private violence: Face of Indian polity

Iqbal Khan

The world is also familiar with “saffron terror” orchestrated and unleashed by the RSS-BJP zealots against Muslims in India and against Pakistan. Masterminds of Mecca Masjid, Ajmer Dargah, and Samjhota Express terrorist cases, like Swami Aseemanand, have been granted full state protection and acquitted in complete travesty of justice after having confessed to India's National Investigation Agency (NIA). Open threats to Pakistan by Indian civilian and military leaders, India's sinister design to subvert China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), and public statements by noted Indian politicians

AKISTAN'S Ambassador to the UN, Munir Akram handed over the dossier on Indian state-sponsored terrorism to UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres, on November 24. UNSG has assured that he would review evidences against India. Ambassador Akram told the UN chief that Indian is involved in orchestrating terrorist attacks in Pakistan and demanded him to take note of this. Akram conveyed to UNSG that the dossier containing evidences against India should be presented before the UN Counter-Terrorism Committee. UNSG has assured that he would review evidences against India. Envoys of the permanent members of the United Nations Security Council, stationed in Islamabad, were briefed by Pakistan's Foreign Secretary on November 16 regarding the “Dossier on Indian State Sponsorship of Terrorism”. The Dossiers containing irrefutable evidence of India's state sponsorship of terrorism against Pakistan were handed over to them. The Dossier presented by Pakistan extensively documents India's active planning, promoting, aiding, abetting, financing and execution of terrorist activities against Pakistan. Since 2001, Pakistan has faced more than 19,000 terrorist attacks on its soil and suffered 83,000 casualties. The direct economic losses have been upward of US $ 126 billion. Meanwhile, India has mischievously masqueraded as a ‘victim’ of terrorism and sought to mislead the international community by hypocritically levelling terrorism-related allegations against Pakistan. It has also conducted false flag operations in IIOJK and inside India to malign Pakistan. That façade has now been removed and the world can see the real face of India. The most familiar and undeniable face of India's state-sponsorship of terrorism against Pakistan is active service Indian Navy Commander Kulbhushan Jadhav, who was caught red-handed in March 2016. His complicity in subversion, sabotage and terrorism in Pakistan is part of the incontrovertible evidence against India. The world is also familiar with “saffron terror” orchestrated and unleashed by the RSS-BJP zealots against Muslims in India and against Pakistan. Masterminds of Mecca Masjid, Ajmer Dargah, and Samjhota Express terrorist cases, like Swami Aseemanand, have been granted full state protection and acquitted in complete travesty of justice after having confessed to India's National Investigation Agency (NIA). Open threats to Pakistan by Indian civilian and military leaders, India's sinister design to subvert China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), and public statements by noted Indian politicians and senior security officials on ‘teaching Pakistan’ a lesson through use of terrorism constitute further incriminating evidence. The rising foot print of Daesh and Al-Qaida in India has been pointed out in recent UN reports, this indicates that India is emerging as a hotbed of UN designated international terrorist organizations and posing a great risk to the region. Recent revelations by the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) files illustrate how India uses its financial system for money laundering and other illegal activities such as terror financing – brazenly and with impunity. FinCEN is a bureau of the US Department of the Treasury. Use of terrorism as an instrument of state policy by India makes it culpable under international law, UN sanctions regime, and international counter-terrorism conventions. It is the collective responsibility of the world community to hold India to account and take practical steps to proceed against the Indian nationals involved in patronage of terrorist entities. Speaking at a joint news conference, Foreign Minister Shah Mehmood Qureshi and Director General Inter-Services Public Relations Major General Babar Iftikhar said that India's sole agenda was to damage Pakistan economically, diplomatically and politically. They said that India was sponsoring terrorism designed to destabilise Pakistan and targeting its economic partnership with China. “India is allowing its land to be used against Pakistan for terrorism,” said FM Qureshi, adding New Delhi was also planning attacks from neighbouring countries. The military spokesperson accused India of sponsoring banned organizations including UN-designated terrorist groups like Tehrik-e-Taliban Pakistan, Jamaat-ul-Ahrar, and Allah Nazar's Baluch Liberation Army. He said that Pakistan expected the international community to play its role for peace and stability by compelling India to immediately halt its state sponsorship of terrorism in Pakistan and bring to justice all those involved in financing and supporting terrorism inside Pakistan according to domestic and international laws. The DG ISPR showed documents proving Indian intelligence agencies' links with the terrorists involved in subversive activities in Pakistan. India has established multi-purpose terrorist base camps for training, harbouring and launching of terrorists into Pakistan. Indian intelligence agencies are managing 87 such terrorists' camps out of which 66 are located in Afghanistan whereas 21 were located in India. The DG ISPR said it had been revealed that Indian intelligence agencies are trying to establish Pakistan's linkage with ISIS by creating Daesh-e-Pakistan'. The DG ISPR said Indian intelligence agencies were also trying to establish Daesh-e-Pakistan. “Recently, 20 Indian Daesh militants have been relocated from India to camps along the Pak-Afghan border. These militants were handed over to Daesh Commander Sheikh Abdul Rahim, alias Abdul Rehman Muslim Dost,” he said. New Delhi has three objectives in derailing Pakistan's journey towards peace, upending economic growth and fostering political stability. “Their first objective is to create hindrance in Pakistan's move towards peace. India cannot accept that Pakistan has defeated terrorism and is moving towards peace and is promoting nationalism and sub-nationalism in Gilgit Baltistan, the tribal districts, and Balochistan,” he said. The second objective, Qureshi said, was “to ensure Pakistan does not become economically stable. Citing India's push for Pakistan to be blacklisted by the Financial Action Task Force. The foreign minister said India was creating obstacles in Pakistan's path towards prosperity. “Their third objective is political instability aimed at destabilising the country.” As usual India went into a denial-cum-victimhood mode. Pakistan has rejected the Indian Ministry of External Affairs' denial of the irrefutable evidence provided by Pakistan on Indian state sponsorship of terrorism. Fully exposed, India has typically resorted to sophistry, obfuscation and re-fabrication. However, bland denials and spewing of old litany of charges, however, will not change facts. In an interesting coincidence, in his new book, “A Promised Land” former US president Barack Obama made very pertinent comments about the utility of sustaining anti-Pakistan sentiment in India. The quickest route to national unity in India is “expressing hostility toward Pakistan,” stated Obama. “Former Indian premier, Dr Manmohan Singh had told Obama, in November 2010 that he feared ‘rising anti-Muslim sentiment had strengthened the influence of Hindu nationalist BJP’.” Obama quoted Singh as saying that the “call of religious and ethnic solidarity can be intoxicating” for politicians, particularly in a country like India. “Violence, both public and private, remained an all-too-pervasive part of Indian life. “Despite its genuine economic progress, ... India remained a chaotic and impoverished place: largely divided by religion and caste, captive to the whims of corrupt local officials and power brokers, hamstrung by a parochial bureaucracy,” Obama added. — The writer is a freelance columnist; e-mail: Iqbal.khan9999@yahoo.com

Gilgit-Baltistan is going to grow

The Maharaja of Kashmir claimed that the whole Gilgit Agency formed his state, but the Indian government was very clear that this was not the case. After the Kashmir darbar submitted a long note to the Indian government, New Delhi concisely and clearly put an end to the confusion. Colonel Fraser, a resident in Kashmir, wrote to Maharaja Sir Hari Singh on March 5, 1941, the final decision of the viceroy

HISTORICALLY, what we used to call the ‘Gilgit Agency’ was made up of the princely states of Hunza and Nagar, the smaller entities of Chilas, Koh Ghizr, Ishkoman, Yasin and Puniyal, and the Gilgit Wazarat. Out of these territories, only the Gilgit Wazarat formed a part of the State of Jammu & Kashmir, while the other areas were under the paramountcy of the British government. The British had been instrumental in pacifying this area, and even helped the Kashmir darbar establish its writ in parts of its own territory. In order to consolidate its control in the area, especially as the Great Game was still on, the British Government of India established the Gilgit Agency in 1889. Since its inception, the Agency controlled the defence, foreign affairs and communications of the region, with the help of a political agent in the Gilgit city and an assistant political agent in Chilas. The Maharaja of Kashmir claimed that the whole Gilgit Agency formed his state, but the Indian government was very clear that this was not the case. After the Kashmir darbar submitted a long note to the Indian government, New Delhi concisely and clearly put an end to the confusion. Colonel Fraser, a resident in Kashmir, wrote to Maharaja Sir Hari Singh on March 5, 1941, the final decision of the viceroy on the status of the constituent units of the Agency: “a) Hunza and Nagar: though these are under the suzerainty of the Kashmir State, they are not part of Kashmir but are separate states; b) Chilas, Koh Ghizr, Ishkoman, and Yasin: though these are under the suzerainty of Kashmir State they are not part of Kashmir but tribal areas. What happened even in Gilgit Wazarat in the aftermath of the transfer of power, it is clear that the entire population was pro-Pakistan. Gilgit-Baltistan is six times the size of Azad Kashmir. The territory also borders the Indian

Illegal Occupied Jammu & Kashmir which is separated by the Line of Control. The territory of present-day Gilgit-Baltistan became a separate administrative unit in 1970 under the name “Northern Areas”. It was formed by the amalgamation of former Gilgit Agency, the Baltistan district and several small former princely states, the larger of which being Hunza and Nagar. G-B covers mostly a highly mountainous area of over 72,971 sq km. It had an estimated population of 1.249 million in 2013 (1.8 million in 2015). Its capital city is Gilgit with 216,760 estimated population. It is home to five of the “eight-thousanders” and more than 50 peaks above 7,000 metres. The main ranges are the Karakoram and the western Himalayas. The Pamir Mountains are to the north, and the Hindu Kush lies to the west. Amongst the highest mountains are K2 (Mount Godwin-Austen) and Nanga Parbat, the latter being one of the most feared mountains in the world. Three of the world's longest glaciers outside the polar regions are found in G-B. The main tourism activities are trekking and mountaineering, and this industry is growing in importance. The present-day G-B territory became a separate unit in 1970 as Northern Areas. It was formed by the amalgamation of Gilgit Agency, Baltistan district of the Ladakh wazarat and the hill states of Hunza and Nagar. It now consists of 14 districts, has a population one million and an area of 73,000 sq km. It shares borders with Pakistan, China, India and Afghanistan: with Khyber-Pukhtunkhwa province to the west, a small portion of Wakhan trip of Afghanistan to the north, the Chinese Xinjiang Uyghur region to the northeast, the Indian-Occupied Jammu & Kashmir to the southeast, and the state of Azad Jammu & Kashmir to the south. Three of the world's longest glaciers outside the polar regions are found in G-B: the Biafo Glacier, the Baltoro Glacier and the Batura Glacier. There are, in addition, several high-altitude lakes in G-B: The economy of the region is primarily based on a traditional route of trade, the historic Silk Road. The China Trade Organization forum led the people of the area to actively invest and learn modern trade knowhow from Xinjiang. Later, the establishment of a chamber of commerce and the Sust dry port (in Gojal Hunza) became a milestone. In early September 2009, Pakistan signed an agreement with China for a major energy project in G-B which includes the construction of a 7,000-MW dam at Bunji in the Astore district. Pakistan gave G-B the status of its fifth legal provisional province. The region is not disputed as it is part of Pakistan. Understanding G-B's strategic position is important. We can do that by revisiting the centrality of G-B in the 19th century Great Game between Russia and British India, and then throw light on the contemporary strategic importance of the region for China and Pakistan on one hand, and the opponents of the BRI, including the US and India. This contest makes the region a critical strategic prize. Gilgit-Baltistan being a province will grow in strength and develop further with its huge potentials. Recently an Indian plot came to limelight, including a plan that was aimed at poisoning the minds of the people of Gilgit-Baltistan through elements of hate. A dirty propaganda campaign has been launched to distort the history and prove that G-B was a disputed territory. But above mentioned facts reveal that G-B never was an integral part of Jammu & Kashmir. It is on record that in 1935, the British Raj leased the area from J&K state's autocratic Maharaja for a period of 60 years. People of G-B acceded to Pakistan willingly after an arduous struggle. They acceded to Pakistan on November 1, 1947 after getting independence from the Dogra army. Similarly, the liberation forces emancipated Skardu after a year. The brave people of G-B defeated a well-equipped and trained army. They are not ready to accept anyone's claim over the region. — The writer is freelance columnist based in Peshawar

Navalny urges EU to target Putin's oligarch backers

BRUSSELS: Russian opposition figure Alexei Navalny urged the EU on Friday to put targeted economic sanctions on the oligarchs surrounding President Vladimir Putin.

"There is no sense in sanctioning colonels or generals or some people who are definitely not travelling a lot," Navalny told MEPs by videolink. Addressing the European Parliament's foreign affairs committee, Navalny, who is recovering in Germany after a poisoning allegedly ordered by the Kremlin, argued for a new strategy. He said the Russian officials and military officers who are traditionally targeted "definitely do not have a lot of estate or bank accounts in Europe".

Instead, he argued, Brussels should go after what he said was Putin's true inner circle of wealthy moguls with yachts and investments in the EU. Western government have concluded that Navalny was poisoned by Novichok, a military-grade poison that would be hard for non-state assassins to procure. He is recovering after treatment in a Berlin hospital, but his case has increased tensions between Moscow and European capitals, especially Berlin. The EU has imposed entry bans and bank account freezes on six people suspected of being responsible, including the head of Russia's FSB intelligence agency. But Navalny said it was a mistake to look for a political motive in Moscow's actions, arguing that the Moscow elite is simply interested in money. "The Russian state must be treated like a bunch of criminals who have temporarily seized power," he said, urging Europe to support the Russian people. He warned Brussels to reject the result of next year's Russian parliamentary elections which he said would certainly be rigged.

UN flies aid into Sudan for Ethiopian refugees

GENEVA: The United Nations said 32 tons of emergency aid were flown into Khartoum on Friday to help the growing number of refugees fleeing into Sudan from Ethiopia. UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, said a second airlift from Dubai was due to arrive on Monday, with more than 43,300 registered refugees now having crossed the border to escape the military offensive. Ethiopian Prime Minister Abiy Ahmed ordered troops into Tigray on November 4 following alleged attacks by Tigray People's Liberation Front forces on federal military camps in the northern region. UNHCR chief Filippo Grandi visited the Sudanese capital Khartoum to review operations, and went to the border river to meet refugees crossing on small boats from Ethiopia.

"I want to express my solidarity and my thanks to Sudan for opening the borders to the refugees," he said. Grandi visited registration, medical and food distribution centres at the border.

In Geneva, UNHCR spokesman Babar Baloch told reporters: "Aid is being mobilised to help refugees, almost half of whom are children. Humanitarian agencies continue to provide shelter and other facilities to help refugees but more resources are required and Sudan needs international support urgently." He said the UNHCR had helped to relocate nearly 10,000 refugees to Um Raquba, some 70 kilometres (40 miles) further inside Sudanese territory.

Xi calls for closer China-ASEAN community relationship

BEIJING: Chinese President Xi Jinping on Friday called for cultivating a closer community with a shared future for China and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). Xi made the remarks via video when addressing the opening ceremony of the 17th China-ASEAN Expo and China-ASEAN Business and Investment Summit held in Nanning, capital city of south China's Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region. Xi said seven years after he announced an initiative for China to work with ASEAN countries for a 21st Century Maritime Silk Road and for a closer China-ASEAN community with a shared future, "the China-ASEAN relationship has grown into the most successful and vibrant model for cooperation in the Asia-Pacific and an exemplary effort in building a community with a shared future for mankind." When confronted by the sudden onslaught of COVID-19 this year, China and ASEAN have helped each other and took on the challenge in solidarity. "Never before have the destinies of people in different countries been so closely connected," as the world is undergoing momentous changes unseen in a century, Xi said. China continues to regard ASEAN as a priority in its neighborhood diplomacy and a key region in high-quality Belt and Road cooperation, he said, adding that China will work with ASEAN to advance all-round cooperation and maintain the good momentum for development and prosperity in the region. Xi suggested that the two sides need to enhance strategic mutual trust and further synergize their development plans. More efforts will be made to build the New International Land-Sea Trade Corridor, strengthen cooperation on infrastructure connectivity, speed up the development of existing economic corridors and key projects, and continue to develop the China-ASEAN Multimodal Transport Alliance. Xi said as next year will mark the 30th anniversary of China-ASEAN dialogue relations, China will work with ASEAN to take their strategic partnership to a higher level. He said the two sides also need to elevate economic and trade cooperation and facilitate an early and full recovery of the regional economy. China welcomes the signing of the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership and looks forward to its early entry into force, he said. China will work with ASEAN countries to sustain the smooth flow of trade, promote mutual investment, open up markets wider to each other, and foster deeply integrated industrial, supply and value chains, Xi said. Provided that all necessary COVID-19 containment protocols are duly observed, steps should be taken to facilitate the movement of people and goods, he added. Stressing the need to deepen cooperation on the digital economy, Xi said China and ASEAN could create more highlights of cooperation in such areas as smart city, 5G, artificial intelligence, e-commerce, big data, blockchain and telemedicine, and strengthen the protection of data security and policy communication and coordination. China will work with ASEAN on the China-ASEAN Information Harbor to advance digital connectivity and build a digital Silk Road, he added. The two sides also need to strengthen cooperation against COVID-19 and enhance capacity building in public health, according to the president.

Xi said China stands ready to work with ASEAN to enhance policy dialogue on public health, information sharing and cooperation on the production, development, and deployment of vaccines. When its COVID-19 vaccines are available for use, China will actively consider the needs of ASEAN countries, he said. China will provide financial support to the COVID-19 ASEAN Response Fund, train 1,000 administrative and specialized personnel in the health sector for ASEAN countries, and work with ASEAN countries to develop the regional reserve of medical supplies for public health emergencies and launch a liaison mechanism for public health emergencies. Xi said China will embark on a new journey next year toward fully building a modern socialist country and the country will stay as committed as ever to further opening-up.

Japan may call new state of emergency

WEB DESK

TOKYO: Japan may have no choice but to declare a state of emergency if the nationwide surge of COVID-19 infections isn't subdued within three weeks, said Yasutoshi Nishimura, the Cabinet minister leading the country's pandemic response, during a news conference Wednesday evening. "The next three weeks are critical," Nishimura said after a meeting of the government's coronavirus subcommittee, adding that the declaration of a state of emergency will "enter the field of view" if the virus doesn't show signs of abating during that period of time. Top officials are beginning to sound the alarm as the virus continues to spread throughout the country, an upward trend they fear could overwhelm the health care system and prevent hospitals from providing basic medical treatment. A sustained increase in new infections has already forced officials to roll back or suspend campaigns intended to reboot the economy through subsidies to the tourism and food industries. Hokkaido was the first prefecture in Japan to declare a state of emergency — though it didn't have a legal basis to do so — in late February, weeks before the central government declared an emergency in seven prefectures in early April. The order was extended nationwide 10 days later and lifted completely on May 25.

'Pakistan players breached Covid protocols'

Six of the 34 players in Pakistan's combined seniors and Shaheens squads tested positive in the first Covid-19 test they took upon landing in New Zealand. They were identified as Sarfaraz Ahmed, Rohail Nazir, Naseem Shah, Mohammad Abbas, Abid Ali and Danish Aziz.

SPORTS DESK

WELLINGTON: New Zealand's director-general of health, Dr Ashley Bloomfield, has given details of how Pakistan players violated Covid-19 protocols at their hotels and given the starkest of warnings that how seriously their offence was taken by the authorities. Six of the 34 players in Pakistan's combined seniors and Shaheens squads tested positive in the first Covid-19 test they took upon landing in New Zealand. They were identified as Sarfaraz

Ahmed, Rohail Nazir, Naseem Shah, Mohammad Abbas, Abid Ali and Danish Aziz. All had cleared multiple tests in Pakistan before the team's departure. "Rather than being in their own rooms, which is a requirement for the first three days, there was some mingling in the hallways, chatting, sharing food and not wearing masks," Dr Bloomfield is quoted as telling RNZ. "I don't know how many times they did that, but it only needs once for us to take a dim view of it. These players signed up to the arrangements in an undertaking that made what was expected of them very clear. At the moment, they are all required to be in their rooms, which was the requirement anyway. The training exemption would not have kicked in until after we had the results of the day-three testing, if we were happy with the results." Dr Bloomfield, who is credited for being the person responsible for New Zealand's successful tackling of the virus, explained that the protocols devised for the Pakistani contingent were already lenient compared to other incoming travellers. "Not being able to train is not a punishment, that was a requirement anyway for the first three days," he said. "Looking at Day 3 test results and CCTV footage, we will have to take a judgment on if or when they may be allowed to be exempt from the arrangement everyone else has to undertake, so they're allowed to break off in bubbles and train. I take a dim view of what we've seen already and we'll take it really seriously. The health official, did, however, state that the violations were limited to within the squad and that the Pakistani touring party had not come into contact with others. "There's no evidence of interaction with people other than the squad, but the mingling amongst team members was not allowed, and it occurred," he said.

Eng-Nether ODI series postponed over virus

LONDON: England's one-day series against the Netherlands scheduled for 2021 has been postponed for a year due to continuing uncertainty over the coronavirus pandemic, it was announced on Friday. Eoin Morgan's 50-over world champions were set to play the three-match series as part of the International Cricket Council's (ICC's) World Cup Super League. The Royal Dutch Cricket Association said it was not viable to play the games with few or no fans. Ashley Giles, managing director of England men's cricket, said: "It is disappointing that we are unable to play the Netherlands in May in what would be England's first visit to Holland. "Hopefully, with the prospect of crowds returning to sport soon, we can rearrange the three matches in 2022 and showcase international cricket to capacity crowds." Dutch high performance manager Roland Lefebvre said: "The prospect of playing the world champions in a full house is exciting, and we look forward to welcoming the team back in 2022." The Super League will determine qualification for the 2023 World Cup in India. The Netherlands, an associate member, are taking part along with the 12 full members of the ICC. — APP

EU to approve first vaccine by end of year

FOREIGN DESK

BRUSSELS: The EU's drugs watchdog Friday said it expects the first application for approval of the COVID-19 vaccine by the end of this year. Officials from the European Medicines Agency (EMA) told Anadolu Agency that none of the companies working to develop the COVID-19 vaccine has yet applied to EMA for market approval. The EMA is conducting a rapid evaluation process about the vaccines that three companies are working on, although there are no applications yet. The vaccines are BioNTech and Pfizer's "BNT162b2", Oxford University and AstraZeneca's "ChAdOx1-SARS-CoV-2" vaccine, and "mRNA-1273" from Moderna Biotech Spain.

Normally, all data on the efficacy, safety, and quality of a vaccine or a drug should be provided at the beginning of the evaluation process by the EMA. However, in emergency situations, the agency can start the assessment using information obtained from ongoing studies before the official application is filed in order to speed up the process.

In order for a drug or vaccine to be placed on the market in the EU, the EU Commission's approval is also needed after the EMA's approval. The EMA officials have evaluated many data from large-scale clinical trials so far in the rapid evaluation process. At this stage, data from several clinical studies continue to pour in. That's why the EMA officials avoid specifying a precise timetable for approval.

UNRWA runs out of money for first time

FOREIGN DESK

JARUSALEM: The United Nations agency for Palestinian refugees said that, for the first time in its history, it has run out of money until the end of the year. The UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) relies on funds from UN member states and the European Union, but said it has been chronically underfunded for years. "But I still believe we can avoid falling. We can avoid falling if the solidarity of the international community is expressed now," he added. The agency said earlier this month it needed to raise $70m by the end of November or it will not be able to pay the full salaries of thousands of employees through the end of the year. UNRWA had notified its entire workforce of 28,000 people that it will be forced to defer their salaries for the rest of the year. Lazzarini said UNRWA had received this year the lowest level of contributions since 2012, at a time when the needs of refugees are compounded by the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. UNRWA is also warning the health system in Gaza is about to collapse due to the coronavirus pandemic. The agency said most of the workers affected are refugees themselves and the cuts will affect employees in countries across the Middle East. UNRWA was established to aid the 700,000 Palestinians who fled or were forced from their homes during the war surrounding Israel's establishment in 1948.

Nigeria Sharia police ban 'Black Friday' promotion

KANO: Islamic police in northern Nigeria's biggest city Kano have warned against using the "Black Friday" sales term, saying it hurts the sensibilities of Muslims. In a letter sent out on Friday, the Hisbah agency told private radio station Cool FM radio to stop advertising a "Black Friday" promotion. "We wish to express our concern on the tagging of the Friday as 'Black Friday' and further inform you that, the majority of the inhabitants of Kano state are Muslims that consider Friday a Holy Day," the letter stated. "You are requested to stop calling the day as Black Friday with immediate effect." According to the letter, the Hisbah got wind of the sales promotion following a complaint from residents. The radio station has in the last few days advertised a promotion involving sales at local shopping centres and a concert which was expected to draw major crowds. The Hisbah informed the organisers that it has deployed its personnel to the venues for surveillance to avoid "any immoral activities". The radio station has not responded to the letter. Kano is a conservative Muslim city where religious clerics commonly preach against western culture.

Nigeria gets back 600-year-old artefact

WEB DESK

ABUJA: Nigeria has received a "priceless" terracotta head believed to be at least 600 years old which was smuggled to the Netherlands, the information minister said. It was taken from the southwestern city of Ile-Ife and smuggled through Ghana. Dutch ambassador to Nigeria Harry Van Dijk on Thursday returned it to Information Minister Lai Mohammed in a ceremony in the Nigerian capital, Abuja. "The smuggler had obtained forged documents" to take it out of the country, Mohammed was quoted as saying in a statement. Dutch customs intercepted it at Amsterdam airport and "alerted the ... Information and Heritage Inspectorate of the Netherlands to give an opinion," the statement said. Dutch officials then contacted their Nigerian counterparts, leading to the return of the "priceless and timeless" artefact, Mohammed said.

European Union adopts tough resolution on Belarus

The European Union has slapped sanctions on Lukashenko and a number of his allies citing election rigging and a violent police crackdown on demonstrators

FOREIGN DESK

BRUSSELS: Sergei Lavrov held talks with Lukashenko and other top officials in the capital Minsk, in the latest show of Russia's support for authorities in its ex-Soviet neighbour. Thousands of protesters demanding Lukashenko's resignation have taken to the streets of Minsk every weekend since the 9 August election that saw the 66-year-old claim a sixth term in office. Protesters believe political novice Svetlana Tikhonovskaya, 38, who took her jailed husband's place in the presidential race, was the true winner. Moscow has continued to back Lukashenko since the protests erupted, with several meetings between senior officials from both sides in recent months. Speaking at a press conference with his Belarusian counterpart

Vladimir Makei, Lavrov accused the United States and several European countries of "gross interference" in the domestic affairs of Belarus. Western countries are employing technologies of organizing mass riots in Russia and Belarus, while their officials set ultimatums against Moscow and Minsk, Lavrov said, as quoted by the Russian agency TASS. "Russia and Belarus are under pressure aimed at changing our stance and limiting our countries' development. The Western media and officials voice nearly ultimatums against us. There have been too many facts of meddling in domestic affairs. They are using the technology of organizing mass riots, and the opposition gets financial and other support," Lavrov went further. In this situation the West is playing "a game without rules" style, Lavrov noted. "Without giving any evidence they are slapping unilateral sanctions. The work of cooperation formats, which had been built for years, is frozen," Russia's top diplomat said. Several Western leaders have refused to recognise the results of the election and voiced support for Tikhonovskaya, who fled to EU member Lithuania shortly after the vote. The European Union has slapped sanctions on Lukashenko and a number of his allies citing election rigging and a violent police crackdown on demonstrators. The European Parliament passed on Thursday a tough resolution on Belarus, in which MEPs rejected the results of the 9 August election and asked for new, free and fair elections in accordance with international standards. Parliament condemned in the strongest possible terms the murder of Raman Bandarenka in Belarus, and expressed its condolences to his family and to all families who have lost loved ones as a result of the repression of Lukashenko's regime. Bandarenka, a 31-year-old art teacher, was brutally beaten on the evening of 11 November by a group of plain-clothed men in masks who reportedly had close ties to the regime. He was taken into detention where he was subjected to further beatings. He later died as a result of his injuries. MEPs demand prompt, thorough, and independent investigations into his death, and more generally, for the EU to lend support to an international investigation of crimes perpetrated by the Lukashenko regime against the people of Belarus. They also called on the Commission to increase its assistance to independent media in Belarus. The resolution highlights that actions taken so far by the EU and the member states against the Lukashenko regime "are insufficient" and welcomed the Council's decision to work on a third package of sanctions aimed at firms and oligarchs with ties to the regime. MEPs also call for the EU and the member states to increase assistance to Belarusian civil society and to increase EU engagement with and support for independent civil society organisations, human rights defenders and independent journalists. The text was adopted by 613 votes in favour, 41 against and 35 abstentions. The European Parliament is often adopting tough texts, on the initiative of individual MEPs or of party groups, but it is more than obvious that key member states have no stomach to rock the boat in Belarus. France keeps on advocating good relations with Moscow, while traditionally anti-Russian Poland is losing its clout as it is vetoing the EU budget.

Occupied West Bank enters lockdown

FOREIGN DESK

RAMALLAH: The occupied West Bank has entered a 48-hour lockdown to limit the spread of the coronavirus pandemic as cases continue to rise. The lockdown started on Friday and will continue until Sunday morning. The territory, which the Palestinian Authority (PA) government has limited control over, will also implement a 14-day partial night-time curfew. Under the general lockdown, travel is prohibited on weekends, as well as from 7pm to 6am on weekdays in and between all the governorates. Only pharmacies and bakeries will be allowed to remain open. There are more than 91,000 cases of the coronavirus in the occupied Palestinian territories, including the West Bank, East Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip. "Movement in the streets will be prevented unless absolutely necessary," interior ministry spokesman Ghassan Nimer said. He said PA security services will conduct patrols in the streets and place barriers at the entrances to some cities, adding that the violators will be punished. Meanwhile, Gaza's ministry of health on Friday announced the highest number of cases in the besieged territory since March. The ministry recorded 922 new cases and two deaths in the past 24 hours, bringing the total number of deaths in the Gaza Strip from the virus to 86. The coastal enclave is struggling to contain the number of cases amid a breakdown of health services and limited medical supplies.

Thai protesters practise 'coup prevention'

The country has for months been rocked by youth-led protests demanding a new constitution, reform of the untouchable monarchy, and for Prime Minister Prayut Chan-O-Cha to resign

BANGKOK: Thousands of democracy activists blocked a major junction in Bangkok Friday to rehearse "coup prevention" strategies in the latest round of Thailand's anti-government protests. The country has for months been rocked by youth-led protests demanding a new constitution, reform of the untouchable monarchy, and for Prime Minister Prayut Chan-O-Cha to resign. Prayut, who came to power in a 2014 coup, this week played down the prospects of being overthrown or introducing martial law. Inflatable Santa Claus figures joined the bright yellow rubber ducks that have become a symbol of the movement as some 5,000 demonstrators massed in the shadow of a motorway flyover in the north of the capital. Natalie, a 32-year-old Bangkok office worker, said the last coup was disastrous for Thailand and warned the country shouldn't go down that path again. "Now is a crisis time in Bangkok and Thailand. I want new elections and to change the prime minister and for a new government to actually listen to the people," she told AFP. As part of what they called "coup prevention" drills, protesters passed an armada of the pool toy ducks over their heads, to represent the military passing over the people to take the front row of Thai politics. Another group paraded portraits of generals who had led past coups before ritually burning them. Army Chief Narongphan Jittkaewtae has rejected coup rumours saying the chance of another putsch was "less than zero".

Political scientist Titipol Phakdeewanich from Ubon Ratchathani University believes another coup is unlikely at present. "I don't think he will be ousted because he still has strong support from conservatives... and big businesses," he told AFP. But in a country that has seen a dozen coups since it became a democracy in 1932, the current round of protests, which began in July, has fuelled rumours another could be looming. The movement has broken new ground for Thai political activism by demanding changes to the monarchy, a once-revered institution which some in the kingdom are beginning to question. A major rally on Wednesday targeted King Maha Vajiralongkorn's huge wealth, demanding more transparency about his financial arrangements. Next week a constitutional court in Bangkok will rule on whether Prayut has broken rules by living in an army house, despite the fact the former general is no longer in the military's top brass. Losing the case could see Prayut forced out of office. – APP

Indian capital faces shortage of ICU beds

WEB DESK

New Delhi: "I wouldn't have ventured out from home until this pandemic is over," says 50-year-old Ishrat Hussain. "But I've to feed my family." Hussain, a father of four, sells vegetables from a cart in the Indian capital, New Delhi, where daily COVID-19 infections have seen a spike in the recent weeks. "Before leaving home in the morning, I strictly tell my children not to go out unnecessarily," he said, adding that he fears every day while at work. "I don't take off my mask for a minute while I'm at work because I do not want to get this infection and spread it to my family. After months, we thought things will get normal now but they are getting worse." On Thursday, the authorities said New Delhi has recorded 5,475 fresh COVID-19 cases and 91 deaths, pushing the city's death toll to 8,811. The city government led by Arvind Kejriwal of the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) told the Delhi High Court on Thursday it was "actively considering" night-time curfew among other steps to tackle the surge in the cases.

Thousands of farmers march to Indian capital

WEB DESK

NEW DELHI: Thousands of farmers have entered the capital New Delhi for a planned protest against new farm laws hours after the police fired several rounds of tear gas and used water cannon to stop the Dilli Chalo (Go to Delhi) march. Protesting Indian farmers scuffled with police earlier on Friday during the march to the capital, against new laws, which will make it easier for farmers to sell their produce directly to private buyers and enter into a contract with private companies. But farmers demand the bills, passed by India's parliament in September, be scrapped fearing the laws will leave them vulnerable to big corporates. A Delhi Police spokesman confirmed to media the farmers have been given permission to enter the national capital and hold a peaceful protest at the Nirankari Samagam Ground in the Burari area. "The farmers have been granted permission to enter Delhi. They can protest peacefully in a ground in Burari area" Anil Mittal, Additional PRO (Delhi Police), told media. However, farmers from several states and trade unions, who wanted to stage protest in the Ramlila ground in the heart of the city, have yet to comment if they would agree to the new venue. Television footage showed plumes of smoke and some people throwing stones at police as thousands pressed against barricades, waving flags and sticks. Some road tractors near the barriers.

UK to impose tougher rules on Google, Facebook

WEB DESK

LONDON: The United Kingdom will impose a new competition regime next year to prevent Google and Facebook using their dominance to push out smaller firms and disadvantage consumers. The code will be enforced by a dedicated unit within the Competition and Markets Authority (CMA), which this year said it needed new laws to keep the tech giants in check. Small number of companies was curtailing growth, reducing innovation and having negative effects on the people and businesses that rely on them. It's time to address that and unleash a new age of tech growth," Dowden said on Friday. The growing power of big tech is attracting intense antitrust scrutiny across the globe with the United States stepping up enforcement and the European Union planning to give itself new powers to crack down on so-called "gatekeepers" that can control access to online stores or apps. The CMA will emerge from the shadow of the European Commission, the region's main antitrust watchdog, when the UK leaves the EU's internal market at the end of the year.

Trump signals he is prepared to leave

"Certainly I will. But you know that," Trump said on Thursday when asked whether he would vacate the building, allowing a peaceful transition of power in January

WASHINGTON: US President Donald Trump said on Thursday that he will leave the White House if the Electoral College formalises President-Elect Joe Biden's victory even as he insisted such a decision would be a mistake as he spent his Thanksgiving renewing baseless claims that massive fraud and crooked officials in battleground states caused his election defeat. "Certainly I will. But you know that," Trump said on Thursday when asked whether he would vacate the building, allowing a peaceful transition of power in January. But Trump - taking questions for the first time since Election Day - insisted that "a lot of things" would happen between now and then that might alter the results. "This has a long way to go," Trump said, even though he lost. The fact that a sitting American president even had to address whether or not he would leave office after losing re-election underscores the extent to which Trump has smashed one convention after another over the last three weeks. While there is no evidence of the kind of widespread fraud Trump has been alleging. - DNA

China' goodbye to poverty inspiration for Pak

Home to around 53 million poor people (a quarter of Pakistan's population) who live below the national poverty line, Pakistan has the best model in place in shape of China to get rid of all faces of poverty in phases

DNA

ISLAMABAD: China's goodbye to poverty brings new inspiration to Pakistan moving ahead more steadily ensuring well-being of its people, says a report carried by Gwadar Pro on Friday. China is coming out with inclusive victory over poverty as its last nine poverty-stricken counties in southwest China's Guizhou Province are officially removed from the poverty list in line with the fulfillment of promise of shaking off poverty by the end of 2020. Home to around 53 million poor people (a quarter of Pakistan's population) who live below the national poverty line, Pakistan has the best model in place in shape of China to get rid of all faces of poverty in phases. If it followed in true letter and spirit, Pakistan boasts a conspicuous chance to lift up big chunk of its society from severe poverty. Since CPEC came to existence, Pakistan is the recipient of China's friendliness ranging from G2G, B2B and people to people connectivity that have helped Pakistan to tune in its priorities as public-centric improving living standard of poor strata of society. China's feat (to delist all 832 countries including last nine impoverished counties identified as poverty-stricken) has made its immaculate mark at a time when Covid-19 stirred up unprecedented human crisis and jeopardized global economies leaving no option but to miss off their national and international targets. Policies had to be revisited. Balance of payments were rescheduled. Sustainable Development Goals went in a whirlpool of uncertainty. China could have revised its poverty alleviation campaign 2020. But it did not surrender and preferred to stand by its resolve. Eventually it achieved zero poverty in all nine counties. Recently, Prime Minister Imran Khan in a media interview said "he wants to replicate the Chinese model in Pakistan that lifted 700 million people out of poverty within a short period of 40 years. "Despite not having electoral politics, the Chinese were good at bringing the best people to the top. It's a system based on meritocracy," Imran admired the Chinese model saying, "How the Communist Party sort of sifts through all the talent and brings it to the top." Faraz Danial, an economist said that Chinese influential vibes had already put positive impacts in Pakistan helping Pakistan to realign itself with sustainable prosperity. "Fresh inspiration from China is a bonanza that should never be slipped from our hands," he added. "Pakistan is committed to poverty alleviation in line with the SDGs target Goal-1 "No Poverty" in all its manifestations everywhere by 2030. According to the Planning Commission, the poverty headcount ratio was 24.3 percent by estimating the poverty line for this period as Rs 3,250.28 per adult equivalent per month, which represented around 50 million people living below the national poverty line in 2015-16, the report added.
