Chaos in New Delhi as farmers enter capital

There were no confirmed casualties

DNA

NEW DELHI: The government of Prime Minister Narendra Modi failed to stop protesting farmers despite police crackdown who entered the historic Red Fort complex in the capital and hoisted their flags. It was earlier reported that the Khalistan flag was hoisted atop the Red Fort. However, upon investigation, it was found to be the 'Nishan Sahib', which bears a close visual similarity to the Khalistan flag but has a very different symbolic meaning. Indian actor and activist, Deep Sidhu, who has been protesting for farmers' rights, posted a video on Facebook, clarifying that only the Nishan Sahib was hoisted on the fort. "We have only hoisted the Nishan Sahib flag on the Red Fort while exercising our democratic right to protest." He said that in such protests, people become angry and that no one person can be blamed for committing an act of fury. He said that flag was hoisted as a sign of "unity in diversity". Growers, angered by laws they say help large, private buyers at the expense of producers, have camped outside New Delhi for almost two months, posing one of the biggest challenges to Prime Minister Narendra Modi since he came to power in 2014. There were no confirmed casualties but Tuesday's disorderly scenes and lingering swirls of gas on the outskirts offered a sharp contrast with televised images of the serried precision of marchers in the city centre's annual military parade. Reuters television images showed thousands of farmers converging on the Red Fort, a historic spot from whose ramparts Modi delivers an annual speech, and milling outside its walls. "Modi will hear us now, he will have to hear us now," said Sukhdev Singh, 55, a farmer from the northern state of Punjab, who was among hundreds of protesters, some on horseback, who broke away from the main route of a tractor protest.

The directives had been issued by Minister for Railways Azam Khan Swati and in that regard he would hold meeting with all chief ministers for their assistance to retrieve Pakistan Railways land from encroachers, an official told APP.

Giving details of the land, he said Pakistan Railways owned 167,690 acres of land across the country, of which 90,326-acre is in Punjab, 39,428-acre in Sindh, 28,228-acre in Balochistan and 9,708-acre in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. He said the Geographic Information System (GIS) survey had also been conducted under the project of computerization of railway land records in which all the encroachments and leases had been recorded in the Pakistan Railways Land Management Information System (PRLMS) software. The official said the database was under verification and being compiled. For the last two years, he said, Pakistan Railways has been doing its utmost to get the problem of land encroachment resolved where thousands of acres of land had been occupied for commercial, residential and agricultural purposes.

Govt ads: APNS asks ministry to implement proposals

It was specifically agreed upon that the classified ads will be reverted to advertising agencies as in the past to resolve the problems being faced in billing and payment procedures.

DNA

KARACHI: The All Pakistan Newspapers Society (APNS) has called upon the information ministry to implement recommendations and proposals agreed upon during meeting of stakeholders and information ministry on December 7, 2020. In a letter written to the Information Secretary Shahera Shahid, the APNS Secretary General

Sarmad Ali drew the attention of the Secretary towards that meeting stating it was concluded that the Ministry of Information will streamline the government advertising procedures and amend the new mechanism being implemented after April 03, 2020. It was specifically agreed upon that the classified ads will be reverted to advertising agencies as in the past to resolve the problems being faced in billing and payment procedures.

It was also agreed upon that the client departments would be allowed to select the media of their choice with the right of PID to make additions / deletions in release of advertisements.

It is regretted that the agreed conclusions have not yet been notified instead a notification has been issued on January 08, 2021 wherein the procedures of Centralized Advertising Policy were reinforced whereby the government departments were strictly forbidden to suggest the media of their choice. This action has caused massive decrease in the quantum of advertisement being released to regional and medium sized newspapers.

You would appreciate that in the era of decentralization and devolution, the insistence on centralization of media, would be disastrous for the growth of newspaper industry and would not only negate the democratic norms but also deprive the departments / ministries / autonomous bodies to select the media of their choice as sponsoring clients are better aware and capable of selecting the media to reach their targeted audience.

The Secretary General requested the Information Secretary to allow the client departments to select the media for their advertisements and notify the decisions taken at the stakeholders meeting of December 08, 2020.

A consistent approach on Kashmir urged

Speaking at the event titled 'India under Modi', former diplomat Amb Aziz Ahmed Khan called for a consistency of Pakistani stance on Kashmir in line with the UN Security Council resolutions

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Speakers of a panel discussion organized by the Institute of Regional Studies (IRS) here on Tuesday urged a consistent policy approach towards Kashmir by Pakistan. Speaking at the event titled 'India under Modi', former diplomat Amb Aziz Ahmed Khan called for a consistency of Pakistani stance on Kashmir in line with the UN Security Council resolutions. Amb Khan was of the view that despite aggressive regional posturing by India and illegal draconian actions against the people of the India-Occupied Jammu and Kashmir (IOJK), Pakistan needed to stick to putting diplomatic pressure on the Indian government to resolve the dispute in accordance with the UN Security Council resolutions. He further called for engaging Pakistani and Kashmiri diaspora abroad and a diplomatic push on the Western capitals. President IRS Amb Nadeem Riyaz added that Pakistan needed not only to engage governments and diaspora but also the parliaments and think-tanks of Western countries. Speaking on India under Modi, Amb Khan was of the view that while former Indian prime minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee represented the softer version of Hindutva, Prime Minister Narendra Modi was implementing the hardline version of it. He shared that Modi had never even expressed regret over the massacre of Muslims in Gujarat while he was the chief minister of the state, let alone apologize for

it. Further alluding towards the hardline Hindutva ideology of the current Prime Minister of India, Amb Khan shared that while Modi proudly adorned headgears of various kinds in public, he was never wearing a Muslim skullcap, which spoke of his prejudice towards the Muslims.

Amb Khan further stated that while the Modi-led ruling BJP was benefitting from the weaknesses of Congress as the only other national-level political party, the farmers' protest could force it to withdraw the three controversial farm laws. He expressed his concern over the ongoing delimitation exercise in India-Occupied Jammu and Kashmir (IOJK). He was of the view that it was aimed at creating seven new constituencies in Jammu to offset the majority of Muslim constituencies in the state assembly of IOJK.

Dr Zafar Nawaz Jaspal of the Quaid-i-Azam University (QAU) expressed his concerns over the aggressive regional policy of India under Modi. He was of the view that the Indian regional policy formulation was inspired by the mandalas concept enunciated by the Indian political philosopher Chanakya by virtue of which a neighboring country had to remain an unfriendly country by definition. He also expressed his concern over the transformation of Indian nuclear posture towards Pakistan from deterrence to what he called 'compellence'. Jaspal was of the view that India was now strongly allied with the US and was, thus, no longer a non-aligned country. Dr Raja Qaiser Ahmed of QAU that the revocation of Article 370 of the Indian Constitution was completely unconstitutional. He shared that any change to the article had to be endorsed by the incumbent government of the state of IOJK as per the Indian Constitution. He added, however, that for repeal of the article, the Constitution prescribed its approval by the Constituent Assembly, which no longer existed. Therefore, he argued that Article 370 could not be constitutionally abrogated. He added that the Modi government had hatched a plan to endorse the abrogation through the Assembly of IOJK once it is elected after the demographic change in the state with migration of a large number of Hindus.

"Actually all those political parties involved in foreign funding are united against the government for sake of NRO," he remarked.

He said that Maulana Fazalur Rehman has to explain his position on charges of leaders of his own party that he received foreign funding from Iraq and Libya. "In this case it was he who only could respond the queries raised on his properties and assets which he purchased from such illegal money." Usman Dar said the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf came into the power with the support of Pakistani youth that was why it was committed to their wel-

'Hypersonic missile tech to start a new arms race in the region'

DNA

ISLAMABAD: The Arms Control and Disarmament Centre (ACDC) at the Institute of Strategic Studies Islamabad (ISSI) organized an in-house discussion meeting on "Hypersonic Missile Race: Regional and Global Implications" on January 26, 2021. The ISSI research faculty and members of the ACDC Advisory Board attended the event. Malik Qasim Mustafa, Director ACDC, moderated the discussion. In her presentation, Ms. Ghazala Yasmin Jalil, Research Fellow at ACDC-ISSI, provided a comprehensive technical overview of the hypersonic missiles and their three main types: guided ballistic missiles; boost-glide missiles; and hypersonic missiles. "What makes hypersonic missiles lethal is not just their speed but their post-launch maneuverability," she said. Russia is already using the hypersonic boost-glide vehicle for its Avangard ICBM in addition to the hypersonic cruise missiles like Kinzhal and Tsirkan. The United States of America also has hypersonic missiles that are aimed at neutralizing Russian and Chinese hypersonic missile development. This great power competition will affect the strategic calculations, undermine nuclear deterrence, and increases the chances of a strategic conflict. While highlighting the regional security implications, she said that development of hypersonic missile technology would start a new arms race that would change the nuclear deterrence calculations between India and Pakistan. India has now joined the global race and only five to six years away from developing hypersonic missiles. India is working on a hypersonic cruise missile BrahMos-II in collaboration with Russia. It would create first strike temptations on the part of New Delhi, which will further make the South Asian nuclear theatre more unstable.

Achieving SDGs

THE Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) Report 2020 ranks Pakistan at 134 out of 166 countries. Pakistan was ranked 130th in 2019. Regress on the ranking means the government needs to do more. We have a ten-year slot and the challenges in all goals are enormous and can result in our failure to achieve them by 2030. It is important that policymakers sit together and find out the best way forward to overcome the hurdles that are making it difficult for us to be on the right track. Out of 17 SDGs, Pakistan is struggling with 13. Even the three goals where we have shown some progress do not indicate that we have achieved them. The authorities must realise that we cannot achieve all these goals by 2030 if we do not show serious commitment. Despite the government's efforts in reducing hunger, the issue is not subsiding anytime soon. Similarly, the state is struggling hard to ensure that every child of the country gets a quality education. Moreover, according to a report by the United Nations Children's Fund (Unicef), 53,000 Pakistani children under five die every year from diarrhoea due to poor water and sanitation. 70 percent of households consume contaminated water. The SDGs dashboard informs us that even the primary jobs that are the state's responsibilities have not improved—in condition or in access. Only a week ago, the first sub-committee meeting of the National Economic Council (NEC) gauged Pakistan's performance on SDGs. The meeting's participants rightly pointed out that better implementation and coordination are must for achieving the SDGs. Actionable plans lie in waiting, projects that have not received the proper attention of the authorities are wanting. It is time for the government to look to improve the standard of life in Pakistan for the average citizen.

A predictable outcome

AT the turn of the year, the back and forth between the Lahore Waste Management Company and the contractors it had hired a few years ago for operational waste cleaning came to a head. LWMC refused to renew the contract, and decided that it would look after the logistics of waste management in the provincial capital on its own. It even went as far as to take over the machinery the Turkish contractors had brought in for use in Lahore, and claimed that it had the right to repossess this equipment. After this unnecessarily forceful decision, which looked to have the backing of the provincial government, LWMC's performance in the past month indicates that it might have been overly hasty in rushing to cancel the agreement. A legal battle awaits, and to top it all off, Lahore has never been dirtier. Waste dumps that are to be cleaned regularly are accumulating garbage, becoming an environmental hazard without any solution posed by the LWMC, apart from making its insufficient staff members carry out extra shifts. The worst part of all of this is that this was not short of predictable. LWMC knew it lacked the manpower and the technical know-how to carry out this serious responsibility, and yet it did not make arrangements to either extend the agreement, or find new contractors if it was displeased with the performance of the Turkish company. A course correction is desperately needed. LWMC must first ensure that the legal proceedings do not result in further embarrassment or losses in terms of penalties paid. For this, it must do its homework and have an airtight case for why it sought for both a dismissal and confiscating the equipment. Beyond that, an urgent solution must be formulated to clean up Lahore. We have seen how easy it is for a large city to quickly become unsanitary and unsafe for residents due to piles of garbage and waste—as evidenced in Karachi. Let's make sure that Lahore does not head down the same path.

Humanity is our only identity

Wajeeha Bilal

This scribe has addressed the effect of human feelings in detail in "The Conscious Ego", that also talks about the Paris massacre of 1961 with an underlying story: "...One claiming to be superior to the other, though there is no proof of superiority being confined to appearances. If our creator had created us with the intention of love, then why would He make us different in appearances that could become a source of dispute in our lives?"

MANY people connect the origin of racism to slavery, or they believe that racism persists into contemporary times because racist ideas are passed down from one generation to the next. Racism does not demonstrate itself so easily. True racism would require being able to have power over someone else, but a skin colour is not sufficient to help people do that. It shows up in different ways; you can sometimes see it in the energy of people or sense it in their tones or actions. God created only one race – i.e. the humans. It is the humans who have created racism. As truthfully as we know in our own spirit that we do not think of ourselves as racists, then how come we see and hear about people being treated differently based on colour. If it is not us and there is no such thing as racism, then why are some of us still a victim to this horrible word. Cultural and ethnic disparities do exist, like the distinction between the shade of my hair and the hue of your hair is no more substantial genetically than the tint of my hair and the hue of my children's hair. Let us all understand that, when we call each other brothers and sisters that is truly real. It is the focus on our similarities not the differences that makes us humans. While it may still be true that your skin could be fair or dark, your body is eventually bound to go to the grave with that skin one day. We may clear out the notion of races, but racism still exists. And if you are raised in this society as a fair beautiful kid like those Disney characters who are the protagonists for our little generations, it's hard to believe that you will grow up not thinking that you are superior because everything in society steers towards telling you that. Even if your parents do not emphasize, everything that you see – the magazines, TV ads and even the society places stress on that. There is a strong relationship between pride and superior representation of light skin on social media just as low self-esteem is related to the misrepresentation of coloured skin that can cause confusion about aspects of identity among children of different colour. While media and society have played some role in imparting the idea of a superior skin, the major reason for racism lies behind the human feelings. Most important of it being due to fear and ego. Fear of differences causes people to form communities and have their own rituals. For such people, whose lives are run by fear and not conscious decisions, that is what makes them form their own groups. As for them community is a good thing, it brings people like them together; people who think alike, talk alike or even look alike, it gives them a sense of security. They feel protected against those who do not. This scribe has addressed the effect of human feelings in detail in "The Conscious Ego", that also talks about the Paris massacre of 1961 with an underlying story: "...One claiming to be superior to the other, though there is no proof of superiority being confined to appearances. If our creator had created us with the intention of love, then why would He make us different in appearances that could become a source of dispute in our lives? I wondered, while taking notes, as my mom's word seeped in my ears..." The fact is we are much more alike than we are different. I believe that the different colours of human race represent nothing but a work of art by the Creator. We cannot be threatened by our differences and exclude those who seem to be different than us in any way. Races and communities do not bring people closer but throw them apart. So how can we heal a nation that is divided along race, class and political lines? If you are only connecting with the people who are like you and people who endanger you the least, you are excluding almost all of God's creation from your community. As we become more and more conscious, we begin to see the similarities that we could not have imagined before. A universal community that excludes none, is the community we must address and hope to see. No matter where you are, strive to be a universal human who loves and appreciates all different creations. "Love is a key part of creating communities that work for everyone and not just the few at the expense of the many", are the resounding words of great Martin Luther King.

Transgender must be included in social safety programs

Muhammad Arshid

The pandemic issue in the country enlarged already existing stigma and discrimination towards the transgender community in the society. During the pandemic, transgender community in Pakistan found themselves in distress and challenging situation. The social distancing protocols and preventive measures against COVID-19 affected their lives due to social inequalities in our society. They lost employment opportunities and then consequently they were unable to afford their basic needs of life including food, clothing, shelter and basic health facilities

ALL humans are created equal and are equal in terms of their basic rights including human dignity and natural rights. The human basic rights have been established through three milestones in human history. First of all it can be traced back to the Farewell Sermon delivered by Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) on the occasion of Hajj. This was a complete sermon where Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) has categorically emphasized on the equality of all humans, eliminating every type of prejudice on the basis of caste, colour, and sex. It was a complete message for rest of humanity to follow the guidelines and to keep human dignity as top most priority in every term. Secondly, almost the same rights have been established by United Nations universal declaration of human rights. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights is a milestone document in history; the United Nations notes that "it sets out, for the first time, fundamental human rights to be universally protected." It further agrees that The UN General Assembly adopted the declaration on December 10, 1948. While progress has been made in upholding human rights, violations continue, and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights continues to remind us that we all have human rights and we must stand up for them. It is worth mention here that the same rights have been adopted in 1973 constitution of Islamic Republic of Pakistan. As the Article no. 8 to 28 of the constitution ensure the fundamental rights without any prejudice, bias or discrimination. Despite of the commitments and establishment of human rights by above mentioned three historic documents the transgender community in Pakistan is suffering marginalization. They are reported to be sexually, mentally, psychology and physically harassed by the society. All human being in the world have equal human rights to enjoy without any discrimination of their, caste, creed and culture. But the transgender community enjoys the least amount of respect or rights in the world general and in Pakistan particular. Majority of the people in the country did not consider them as a part of their society, they don't like to eat, drink and interact with them. Being marginalized and mistreated in the society they do not have their fundamental rights and do not consider equally like other citizen of Pakistan. According to the Census of 2017, Pakistan's total population is 207.75 million and transgender people are 10418. This constitutes just .005 per cent of the total population of the country. The actual estimates of transgender in Pakistan are more than reported in the census. According to the estimate of trans-welfare unions, there are more two million transgender living with their Gurus/teachers only in colonies/rented houses. It is totally unjust to keep this community miserable despite of historic judgment passed by Honorable Supreme Court of Pakistan to ensure their fundamental rights and same has been followed by a bill passed by august parliament of Pakistan. The COVID-19 pandemic and then governmental preventive measures of lockdown and closer of social and recreational activities throughout the country the vulnerable groups of daily wages, Rehry Ban and especially transgender community faced considerable challenges and miseries that suffered them more than others. The pandemic issue in the country enlarged already existing stigma and discrimination towards the transgender community in the society. During the pandemic, transgender community in Pakistan found themselves in distress and challenging situation. The social distancing protocols and preventive measures against COVID-19 affected their lives due to social inequalities in our society. They lost employment opportunities and then consequently they were unable to afford their basic needs of life including food, clothing, shelter and basic health facilities. Despite of all these commitments they are living a subaltern life in Pakistan where government need to consider them on priority basis and at least to include transgender in BISP, Ahsas and other social safety programs so that their survival can be ensured specially during these natural catastrophe like COVID-19.

From the city's north they went to its centre, home to government buildings. They commandeered cranes and used ropes to tear down roadblocks, forcing constables in riot gear to give way, Reuters witnesses said. A second group rode tractors to reach a key traffic junction in the city centre, also breaching barricades after similar clashes with police. Domestic television channels showed images of several bloodied protesters. Protest organiser Samyukt Kisan Morcha said the groups swerving from set routes did not represent the majority of farmers.

"None of the leaders disappeared," the grouping of farm unions said in a statement. "They are following the set routes." Earlier, tens of thousands of bearded and turbanned farmers, many bundled against the winter cold, drove a convoy of tractors festooned with the Indian tricolour and union flags through the city's fringes.

Global ice sheets melting at 'worst-case' rates

LONDON: The rate at which ice is disappearing across the world matches "worst-case climate warming scenarios", UK scientists have warned in new research. A team from the universities of Edinburgh and Leeds and University College London said the rate at which ice is melting across the world's polar regions and mountains has increased markedly in the last three decades. Using satellite data, the experts found the Earth lost 28 trillion tonnes of ice between 1994 and 2017.

The rate of loss has risen from 0.8 trillion tonnes per year in the 1990s to 1.3 trillion tonnes per year by 2017, with potentially disastrous consequences for people living in coastal areas.

"The ice sheets are now following the worst-case climate warming scenarios set out by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC)," said Dr Thomas Slater, a research fellow at Leeds' Centre for Polar Observation and Modelling. "Sea level rise on this scale will have very serious impacts on coastal communities this century."

Input from United Nations' IPCC has been critical to forming international climate change strategies, including the 2015 Paris Agreement under which the majority of greenhouse gas emitting nations agreed to mitigate the impact of global warming. The universities' research, published Monday in the European Geosciences Union's journal The Cryosphere, was the first of its kind to use satellite data.

Bowlers dominate on opening day of first Pakistan, SA Test

After reducing the Proteas side to a small total of 220 in their first innings on a track that seemed flat initially, the Pakistan side was provided a rude awakening as South African bowlers ripped through their top-order

SPORTS DESK

KARACHI: Bowlers dominated on the first day of the first Test between Pakistan and South Africa as 14 wickets fell at the National Stadium in Karachi to bring an end to an eventful yet even day of cricket. After reducing the Proteas side to a small total of 220 in their first innings on a track that seemed flat initially, the Pakistan side was provided a rude awakening as South African bowlers ripped through their top-order. Opener Abid Ali, who has been searching for form in recent times, had his stumps uprooted, by pacer Kagiso Rabada, after scoring just four runs off nine deliveries as the ball stayed low. The fiery Rabada then got the ball to bounce higher than usual from the same length as debutant Imran Butt tried to fend off the brutal delivery only to get caught by substitute fielder Keegan Petersen. Veteran batsman Azhar Ali and skipper Babar Azam then tried to negate the aggression shown by the Proteas bowlers with a cautious approach. A master-stroke by skipper Quinton de Kock, to introduce left-arm spinner Keshav Maharaj in the final moments of the day, brought with it the huge wicket of the prolific Babar Azam (7 runs off 30 deliveries). Night-watchman Shaheen Afridi was cleaned up by a brutal delivery from pacer Anrich Nortje to reduce Pakistan to 27 for the loss of four wickets. Batsmen Azhar Ali (5 runs off 40 deliveries) and Fawad Alam (5 runs off 3 balls) played out the remaining deliveries to ensure that their side did not lose any more wickets at the end of an impactful day. Rabada was the pick of the bowlers for his side on day one picking up two quick wickets while giving away just eight runs in six overs in a hostile and fiery spell of fast-bowling. However, a wicket each by Maharaj and Nortje put Pakistan completely on the back-foot at the end of day-one. Earlier, South Africa's captain Quinton de Kock won the toss and elected to bat first on a visibly flat track against Pakistan. Shaheen Shah found his groove early picking up the edge of opener Aiden Markram, expertly caught by the diving debutant Imran Butt at second slip, after the batsman scored just 13 runs off 16 deliveries. Rassie van der Dussen (17 runs off 30 deliveries) was the next to depart after a horrible mix-up with fellow batsman Dean Elgar, as wicketkeeper Mohammad Rizwan charged to the wickets in a Jonty Rhodes-esque manner to complete the run-out. Veteran batsman Faf du Plessis (23 runs off 46 balls) got a start but was undone by leg-spinner Yasir Shah as Rizwan collected a simple catch behind stumps. Skipper Quinton de Kock (15 runs off 23 deliveries), known for his flamboyant style of batting, took an ill-advised chance against debutant left-arm spinner Nauman Ali which landed in the capable hands of fielder Imran Butt.

Clashes break out in Tunisia after protester dies

WEB DESK

TUNISIA Tunisian protester injured during clashes with police has died in hospital, state media reported, leading to more violent confrontations between demonstrators and security services in the town of Sbeitla about three hours south of the capital Tunis. Haykel Rachdi's family told local media he had been struck by a tear gas canister after joining the protests that erupted this month on the anniversary of Tunisia's 2011 revolution that introduced democracy in the North African nation. The Public Prosecutor's office in Kasserine, the biggest city near Sbeitla, has ordered an autopsy to determine the cause of Rachdi's death, the state news agency, TAP, said on Monday. After news of his death, a group of young men tried to storm and torch the Sbeitla police station, leading to more clashes, TAP reported. The incident raised the temperature ahead of demonstrations over inequality and police abuses planned on Tuesday in Tunis and other cities and backed by rights groups. Tunisia has seen a recent wave of nighttime clashes, with security forces carrying out mass arrests, as protesters angry at the failure of successive governments to deliver on the promise of the 2011 revolution amid economic collapse exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic and lockdown measures.

The government on Saturday extended a night-time curfew from 8pm to 5am, and banned gatherings until February 14. Activists responded with day-time protests against police repression, corruption and poverty, 10 years after the revolution that overthrew long-time ruler Zine El Abidine Ben Ali. Sbeitla, in the central region of Kasserine, had already seen clashes last week after rumours that Rachdi had died. At that time, the interior ministry denied that he was dead and announced an investigation into the circumstances of his injuries. Mothers in the Tunisian capital have accused authorities of arbitrarily arresting their children in response to the unrest, with rights groups saying at least 1,000 people have been arrested. Twenty-eight civil society groups, denouncing police repression, called for a rally on Tuesday in front of parliament. It comes as parliament is set to vote on new ministers appointed in a sweeping cabinet reshuffle by Prime Minister Hichem Mechichi. President Kais Saied on Monday criticised the absence of women in the new line-up and pointed out that the reshuffle had not been examined by the council of ministers, as the constitution demands. Without naming names, Saied also said one of the proposed ministers was "involved in a corruption case" and that three others had conflicts of interest.

UN chief urges global alliance to counter rise of neo-Nazis

FOREIGN DESK

NEW YORK: The secretary-general of the United Nations has urged coordinated global action to build an alliance against the growth and spread of neo-Nazism and white supremacy, and the resurgence of xenophobia, anti-Semitism and hate speech sparked partly by the COVID-19 pandemic. Antonio Guterres made the appeal on Monday at the annual Park East Synagogue and the UN International Holocaust Remembrance Service marking Wednesday's 76th anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp, held virtually this year because of COVID-19. He also urged international action "to fight propaganda and disinformation", and called for stepped-up education on Nazi actions during World War II, stressing that nearly two-thirds of young people in the United States do not know that six million Jews were killed during the Holocaust. The pandemic "has exacerbated longstanding injustices and divisions", he warned. "Propaganda linking Jews with the pandemic, for example, by accusing them of creating the virus as part of a bid for global domination, would be ridiculous, if it were not so dangerous," he said. "This is just the latest manifestation of an anti-Semitic trope that dates back to at least the 14th century, when Jews were accused of spreading the bubonic plague."

Netherlands rocked by third night of rioting

Earlier PM Mark Rutte condemned what he called the "criminal violence" of the previous night, which police officials described as the "worst rioting in 40 years". The curfew, the first in the Netherlands since World War II, was imposed after the RIVM warned of a new wave of cases due to the "British variant"

WEB DESK

AMSTERDAM: Police in the Netherlands arrested at least 150 people after rioting broke out for a third night following weekend protests triggered by anger over a coronavirus lockdown and nighttime curfew. Riot police clashed with groups of protesters and used water cannon against looters on Monday in the port city of Rotterdam, where the mayor issued a decree broadening police powers of arrest. Rioters smashed windows and looted stores. They demolished bus stops, lit fires and attacked police with fireworks and stones. Journalists and camera crews were also victims of the violence. Rotterdam Mayor Ahmed Aboutaleb called the mob "shameless thieves". Tear gas was used to disperse crowds in Haarlem as the unrest spread to smaller towns and cities including Amersfoort in the east, Geleen in the south, and The Hague. In Brabant and 's-Hertogenbosch, rioters tried to get into hospitals, local media reported. Police cordoned off the entrances and ambulances had to be diverted to other clinics. Police Chief Willem Woelders said on Twitter officers were dealing with "rioting youths who are throwing fireworks". Earlier Prime Minister Mark Rutte condemned what he called the "criminal violence" of the previous night, which police officials described as the "worst rioting in 40 years". The curfew, the first in the Netherlands since World War II, was imposed after the National Institute for Health (RIVM) warned of a new wave of cases due to the "British variant" of COVID-19, although numbers of new infections in the Netherlands have been declining for weeks. Some 4,129 new cases were reported on Monday, the lowest number since December 1.

Violators of the 9pm (20:00 GMT) to 4:30am (03:30 GMT) curfew, which will remain in force until at least February 10, face a 95 euro ($115) fine. There are a number of exemptions including for people who have to work, attend funerals or walk their dogs, providing they present a certificate. The Netherlands was already under its toughest measures since the start of the pandemic, with bars and restaurants having closed in October, and schools and non-essential shops shut since December. Images posted on social media on Monday showed rioters looting a shop in Den Bosch and a press photographer being hit in the head in Haarlem, after an angry mob chased him off and threw a brick at him. Police Union chief Koen Simmers on Monday told public broadcaster NOS that police were prepared should the rioting continue. "I hope it was a one-off, but I'm afraid it could be a harbinger for the days and weeks to come," Simmers said. Some right-wing politicians, including Geert Wilders, have called on the government to send in the army to quell the riots. However, there is no indication that Rutte's cabinet is considering a military deployment.

expediency over morality to give safe passage to the corrupt people, which eventually led to acceptance of corruption in the society. He said the past regimes had decriminalized the corruption, which seriously damaged the moral fabric of the society, where an honest person was regarded as 'loser'. He said it was only Imran Khan, who literally had challenged the status quo for the first time in the history of Pakistan to purge the country of corruption. The agreement with Broad-sheet was signed by previous governments and the country might suffer losses in case of non-payment to Broadsheet, he added.

The minister said contrary to previous practices, Prime Minister Imran Khan would not bow down to any pressure and hold all corrupt elements accountable.

About reforms in Senate election process, he said everyone knew that votes were bought and sold in the Senate elections and the government wanted to restore the sanctity of upper house of the parliament.

He said Prime Minister Imran Khan wanted transparency in Senate polls and the government was striving to restore sanctity of the Senate as sale and purchase of votes in Senate elections was quite common in past.

A constitutional amendment bill to make the upper house elections transparent was already in the National Assembly, he added.

He said the government could resort to present the bill in the National Assembly for ensuring open ballot in the Senate elections. Shibli said economic indicators were showing a positive trajectory as exports of the country were increasing swiftly due to prudent policies of the government. He said the previous government had left the national economy in a fragile situation but the incumbent government put it back on the right track.

FB suspends Israeli PM's chatbot

WEB DESK

TEL AVIV: Facebook has removed a post by Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and suspended a chatbot operated by his page for violating the company's privacy policy. According to The Jerusalem Post newspaper, Facebook took the move after Netanyahu's page asked to provide personal details of people over the age of 60, who did not get the coronavirus vaccination. On Thursday, Netanyahu's account on Twitter and Facebook published calls for the people over 60 to get the vaccination.

So far, the data of the Israeli Health Ministry says that more than 2.5 million Israelis received the vaccine. "In accordance with our privacy policy, we don't allow content that shares or asks for people's medical information," Facebook said in a statement cited by the newspaper. Netanyahu's Likud party said in a statement that Netanyahu meant to help in the awareness campaign to take the vaccination and to convince the people over 60 who are still hesitating to receive the vaccine.

'Stop hoarding COVID-19 vaccines'

WEB DESK

JOHANNESBURG: South African President Cyril Ramaphosa on Tuesday urged wealthy countries not to hoard surplus doses of COVID-19 vaccine, saying the world needed to come together to fight the pandemic.

South Africa has recorded nearly half the coronavirus deaths in Africa, and the continent as a whole is struggling to secure sufficient vaccines to start countrywide inoculation programmes for its 1.3 billion people. "We need those who have hoarded the vaccines to release the vaccines so that other countries can have them," Ramaphosa told a virtual meeting of the World Economic Forum.

"The rich countries of the world went out and acquired large doses. ... Some countries even acquired up to four times what their population needs ... to the exclusion of other countries." World Health Organization Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus last week described this unequal access as a "catastrophic moral failure", urging countries and manufacturers to spread doses more fairly around the world.

Ramaphosa chairs the African Union, which this month secured 270 million shots for the continent to supplement 600 million doses coming from the COVAX scheme co-led by the WHO. Those doses are expected to become available this year but none have arrived yet, while parts of Europe, Asia and the Americas are well into their vaccination programmes.

Portugal's COVID surge raises alarm

FOREIGN DESK

As little as nine months ago, Portugal was considered a model of success in the battle against COVID-19, particularly in comparison to neighbouring Spain. But in early 2021, with the country's rate of new cases reaching the highest in the world in proportion to its population last week, and ambulances queuing outside Lisbon hospitals as its health service buckles under the strain, it is a grimly different story.

"The main hospitals are over-charged with sick people and doctors," Manuel Carvalho, the director of one of Portugal's biggest daily newspapers, Público, told Al Jazeera. "It is increasingly impossible to take care of all people that ask for help. Things are really bad and there are no signs of improvement." Record death tolls from the pandemic were set each day last week, rising steadily from 152 on January 17 to 275 on January 24, while on Saturday 15,000 new cases were registered in just 24 hours. All of this is a far cry from early last year, when Portugal was the last country in Europe to register a COVID-19 case, on March 2. Having swiftly brought in confinement measures, until May, while Spain's contagions marked Europe-wide highs, Portugal's total contagion figures were at times as little as 10 percent of its neighbour.

Janet Yellen confirmed as US Treasury secretary

WEB DESK

WASHINGTON: Janet Yellen was confirmed by the U.S. Senate as the country's 78th Treasury secretary and the first woman to hold the job, putting her in charge of overseeing an economy that continues to be hobbled by the coronavirus pandemic.

The Senate approved Yellen in a 84-15 vote on Monday, making her among the first of President Joe Biden's cabinet picks to be confirmed. She will be sworn in later in the evening by a Treasury official, according to a person familiar with the matter, becoming only the second American to have been both Federal Reserve chair and Treasury secretary. The 74-year-old was also the first woman to head the U.S. central bank, which she left in early 2018 after overseeing a winding back of monetary stimulus after the last recession and its slow recovery. Now, she's back in crisis-fighting mode, this time as a Democratic administration's top economic official.

The first package of political reforms was presented at a meeting of the National Council of Public Trust (CNPC) on December 20, 2019. All solutions have already been implemented in practice. The registration barrier for the establishment of political parties has been halved (to 20,000 members). The second package of political reforms was announced on September 1, 2020 in the annual Address of the President to the people of Kazakhstan. In it, the Head of State announced a gradual transition from 2021 to direct elections of rural akims. Special attention is paid to strengthening mechanisms for the protection of human rights. To this end, the Head of State pointed to the need to improve legislation to combat torture, human trafficking, and protect citizens (especially children) from cyberbullying. In particular, they were asked to reduce the threshold for passing elections to the Mazhilis of the Parliament for political parties from 7 to 5%. Such a tool as online petitions will help to implement the concept of a "hearing state" more broadly and accurately, as well as to involve civil society in the decision-making process. Adopt a separate law on the Ombudsman (the law will streamline the activities of this institution in various fields and sectors). The Head of State emphasizes the importance of further improvement of legislation in the field of human rights protection.

Italy PM quits to seek new govt

ROME: Prime Minister Giuseppe Conte resigned Tuesday in the hope of forming a new government after weeks of turmoil in his ruling coalition, leaving Italy rudderless as it battles the deadly coronavirus pandemic.

He tendered his resignation to President Sergio Mattarella, the ultimate arbiter of Italian political crises, who invited him to stay on in a caretaker capacity pending discussions on what happens next. The uneasy coalition that has led Italy since September 2019 was fatally weakened earlier this month by the withdrawal of former premier Matteo Renzi's small but crucial Italia Viva party.

Ahead of a key vote in parliament this week that he looked set to lose, Conte informed his cabinet on Tuesday that he would quit in what supporters said was a move to form a new government. After the meeting with Mattarella, a spokesman for the president said he "reserves the right to decide (what to do next) and invited the government to stay in office in a caretaker capacity".

Mattarella will open discussions with party leaders on Wednesday afternoon which are likely to lead into Thursday - leaving a vacuum at the top of the eurozone's third largest economy at a crucial time. Italy was the first European country to face the full force of the Covid-19 pandemic and has since suffered badly, with the economy plunged into recession and deaths still rising by around 400 a day. Parts of the country remain under partial lockdown, the vaccination programme has slowed and a deadline is looming to agree plans to spend billions of euros in European Union recovery funds. Foreign Minister Luigi Di Maio, one of the leaders of the populist Five Star Movement (M5S), the largest in parliament, earlier said it was time to rally around Conte.

Trump impeachment article goes to US Senate

The formal step kickstarts the trial phase of the impeachment process, in which all 100 senators will sit as jurors to hear evidence and legal arguments from the House managers and Trump's defence team. To be convicted, the Senate must secure a two-thirds majority on the impeachment charge

DNA

WASHINGTON: House impeachment managers arrive to deliver an article of impeachment against former President Donald Trump to the Senate for trial on accusations of inciting the deadly January 6 attack on the Capitol. The US House of Representatives has presented its article of impeachment against Donald Trump to the Senate, a step that formally sets in motion the Senate trial against the former United States president, which is expected to start next month. Walking from one side of the US Capitol to the other, nine House managers appointed by Speaker Nancy Pelosi hand-delivered the impeachment document to the Senate on Monday evening. The article charged Trump with "incitement of insurrection" in relation to the deadly storming on January 6 of the US Capitol building in Washington, DC by a mob of his supporters. The House impeached Trump on January 13 on the same charge - making him the first president in US history to be impeached twice. Representative Jamie Raskin, a constitutional scholar and one of the House managers who will be acting as prosecutors in the Senate trial against Trump, read the article of impeachment out loud to the upper house on Monday. "President Trump repeatedly issued false statements asserting that the presidential election results were the product of widespread fraud, and should not be accepted by the American people, or certified by state or federal officials," Raskin said. The formal step kickstarts the trial phase of the impeachment process, in which all 100 senators will sit as jurors to hear evidence and legal arguments from the House managers and Trump's defence team. To be convicted, the Senate must secure a two-thirds majority on the impeachment charge. If that happens, a subsequent vote could bar Trump from running for public office again in the future. Senate Democratic and Republican leaders have agreed on a timeline for the trial, which is expected to begin during the week of February 8. "Both the House managers and the former president's counsel will have a period of time to draft their legal briefs, just as they did in previous trials," Senate leader Chuck Schumer said in remarks to the chamber on Monday. "Once the briefs are drafted, presentations by the parties will commence the week of February 8th," he said. Senators will be sworn in as jurors on Wednesday and a summons will be sent by the Senate to the former president, requiring him to answer the article of impeachment. Trump earlier appeared defiant amid accusations he incited the Capitol mob in a speech he gave before the breach and in repeated false claims that the presidential election had been stolen from him. Before the House vote to impeach him, Trump had said his speech to the January 6 rally of his supporters was "totally appropriate". Senator Patrick Leahy, a senior Democrat who holds the title of president pro tempore of the Senate, will preside over the trial instead of Supreme Court Justice John Roberts.

China to conduct military drills

FOREIGN DESK

BEIJING: China said on Tuesday it will conduct military exercises in the South China Sea this week, just days after Beijing bristled at a U.S. aircraft carrier group's entry into the disputed waters. A notice issued by the country's Maritime Safety Administration prohibited entry into a portion of waters in the Gulf of Tonkin to the west of the Leizhou Peninsula in south-western China from Jan. 27 to Jan. 30, but it did not offer details on when the drills would take place or at what scale. A U.S. carrier group led by the USS Theodore Roosevelt entered the South China Sea on Saturday to promote "freedom of the seas," the U.S. military said, days after Joe Biden began his term as president. The contested waters have become another flashpoint in the increasingly testy bilateral relationship between Beijing and Washington. The U.S. military has steadily increased its activities there in recent years as China asserts its territorial claims in the area in conflict with neighboring countries including Vietnam, Malaysia, the Philippines, Brunei and Taiwan. The announcement of the drills in the Gulf of Tonkin, just east of Vietnam, came as the Southeast Asian country opened a key Communist Party congress in Hanoi. China on Monday complained that the United States frequently sends aircraft and vessels into the South China Sea, through which trillion dollars in trade flow every year, to "flex its muscles" and said such actions are not conducive to peace and stability in the region.

Construction of alternate Babri Mosque begins

FOREIGN DESK

NEW DELHI: The groundbreaking ceremony for the alternate Babri Mosque was held Tuesday in the northern Indian state of Ayodhya. A flag hoisting ceremony and a tree plantation drive was held to mark the official start of its construction. The Indo-Islamic Cultural Foundation Trust will oversee the project that has drawn mixed emotions among Indian Muslims. A decades-long bloody dispute ensued after the 16th-century Babri Mosque in the state of Uttar Pradesh was torn down by Hindu hardliners in 1992, who claimed the site was the birthplace of one of their gods, Lord Ram. In November 2019, India's top court ruled that a temple can be built at the site, and ordered the allotment of a separate piece of land for the construction of another mosque in place of the Babri Mosque. "The process of construction has officially started today on Republic Day. Soil testing was also conducted at the site," Athar Hussain, secretary of the trust, told media.

NEW DELHI: A Indian Muslim stand-up comic has spent 25 days in a Madhya Pradesh jail for jokes he did not tell an audience, but on suspicions he was "going to". Mumbai-based Munawar Faruqui, 28, is facing legal action in two states. In Madhya Pradesh, he was arrested while performing by Indore police for allegedly insulting Hindu deities during rehearsals. In neighbouring Uttar Pradesh, he is sought by the police in another case of allegedly insulting Hindu deities as well as Home Minister Amit Shah. On Monday, the Indore bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court reserved its order on Faruqui's bail application. The court was hearing the comedian's bail application after two pleas were rejected by a lower court earlier this month. Both the states are governed by the right-wing Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), of which Shah is a member and which also controls the federal government led by Prime Minister Narendra Modi.

Taliban delegation visits Iran

TEHRAN: A high-level Taliban delegation arrived in Tehran on Tuesday for talks with Iranian officials on the peace process in war-torn Afghanistan. Iran's Foreign Ministry spokesman Saeed Khatibzadeh said the delegation's visit of the delegation, led by deputy leader Mullah Ghani Baradar, comes upon an invitation from Tehran. The delegation will meet senior Iranian officials during the visit, including Foreign Minister Javad Zarif and Iran's special envoy for Afghanistan Ebrahim Taherianfar. The ongoing intra-Afghan peace process and US troop withdrawal from the war-torn country are expected to figure high during the discussions. Taliban spokesman Mohammad Naeem said the two sides will discuss "relations between Tehran and Kabul, issues related to Afghan refugees in Iran, and prevailing political and security situation of Afghanistan and the region". The visit comes in the middle of the second round of intra-Afghan talks in Doha and days after the new US administration said it will review a deal reached between the militant group and the outgoing Donald Trump administration on the drawdown of US troops from the war-ravaged country. The second leg of marathon talks between the Afghan government and the Taliban that resumed on Jan. 6 has made little progress, even as violence peaks in Afghanistan. The rising incidents of violence and high civilian casualties have cast a shadow over the talks that first began in September last year.

'Indian media is propaganda machine controlled by politicians'

DNA

BEIJING: In particular, in recent years, the Indian media have played a very negative role in Sino-Indian relations. Some Indian media have increasingly lost their independence and objectivity, just like a propaganda machine controlled by the politicians and national extremism. The reason why China has taken countermeasures against India is that India has gone too far on the border issue in recent years, India has gone too far not only with China, but also with Pakistan, Nepal and Bangladesh. On this issue, there is a general consensus among the people of other countries in South Asia. This was stated by Cheng Xizhong, visiting professor at Southwest University of Political Science and Law and senior fellow of the Charhar Institute in his article issued on Tuesday.

He said, on January 24, more than two months after the 8th round of Corps Commander Level Meeting, China and India held the 9th round of Corps Commander Level Meeting to negotiate settlement of the border confrontation. Although the official press release has not yet been released, the Indian media suddenly exaggerated the tension on the border, saying that the border troops of the two countries recently had a physical conflict in the Sikkim section of the Sino-Indian border. At least 20 Chinese soldiers were injured, while only four Indian soldiers got injured. Chinese sources quickly responded that "the Indian media often have no bottom line and make up false reports." "We have received some inquiries about the physical conflict between the Indian troops and the Chinese troops in Sikkim," the Indian Army said in a statement on January 25. "It needs to be clarified that on January 20, there was a slight confrontation in Naku La area of North Sikkim, which was resolved by the local commanders in accordance with the established agreement between the two sides. The media should not exaggerate the fake report", the statement said. The 9th round of Corps Commander Level Meeting has not come easily. For a long time, the Indian media has been constantly stirring up the flames, confusing the public. If it goes on like this, it will damage its own reputation and the interests of the country in the end. The demarcation of the border between China and India is an issue left over by history and also an issue left over by the British colonial days. Since China and India established diplomatic relations 70 years ago, there were opportunities to formally resolve the border issue. Unfortunately, due to various reasons, the opportunities have been missed. At present, both China and India are in the rising period of national rejuvenation, awareness of geopolitical competition is rising, especially the territorial issue involves the national feelings of the two countries, in addition, there are third-party interference and other reasons, which makes it more difficult to solve border issue. Cheng Xizhong observed that over the past few decades, India's border deployment is far more than China's, whether in terms of permanent troops or military equipment. This is determined by the natural and geographical environment of the border areas between the two countries, because the altitude of China's border area is higher, while that of India's border area is relatively low, so it is not necessary for China to have a large number of troops in the border areas. What's more, China persists in building a good-neighbourly relationship and partnership with its neighbours, and China wants to resolve the border dispute peacefully with India through consultation and dialogue. Therefore, from this perspective, China does not wish to send a large number of troops to the border areas. Since last year, China's increase in the number of troops in the border areas is a response and countermeasure to the Indians substantial increase of troops in border areas. Its fundamental purpose is to defend China's territorial sovereignty and interests and to prevent the Indian troops from taking further dangerous actions driven by adventurism, he said.

Roosevelt Hotel not being sold: Senate told

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Minister for Aviation Division Ghulam Sarwar Khan Tuesday apprised the Senate that Roosevelt Hotel was not being sold, however, it was being leased out for setting up a joint venture project. The Cabinet Committee on Privatization in its meeting held on November 15, 2019 considered the proposal submitted by the Ministry of Privatization regarding leasing out the Roosevelt site, he added. Replying to a question during the Question Hour, the minister said the same was under process in the Ministry of Privatization. He said the government had decided to shut down operation of the Roosevelt Hotel, New York, as it was closed on December 18, 2020. The reasons for the closures of the hotel were included imposing restriction on travel to and from the United States of America by President Trump March 12, 2020, closure of all schools, restaurants, bars and theaters and 90 percent reduction of Roosevelt's occupancy. He said Roosevelt's cash flows resultantly reduced drastically and the PIA-IL funded the cash shortfall from its resources. Continuing partial hotel operation in the wake of cancellation of UNGA, fashion show, NY Marathon, US Open etcetera became unsustainable, as hotel's revised forecast projected additional substantial cash short falls, he said. He said the PIA-IL had advanced approximately $17 million till to date in order to protect the asset and to meet mandatory payments. Roosevelt did not qualify for any bailout packages offered by the US government as ultimate beneficial owner being a sovereign state, he said.
